FOURTH SERIES.

LONDON:
MITCHELL HUGHES AND CLARKE, 140 WARDOUR STREET, W.

PREFATORY NOTE.

THE EDITORS have the pleasure, in issuing the first volume of a New Series, to again acknowledge the kind assistance of the gentlemen contributing the accounts of the Inscriptions at the British Cemeteries of the Ionian Islands and those of Cawnpore Cantonment Cemetery, both of great interest to many families in England; also those of St. Mary's Churchyard, Woolwich. To the subscribers of the various family pedigrees they also are much indebted for interesting details, which afford great pleasure to our numerous readers. It was their pleasure also to introduce the interesting Registers of St. Anne's Church, Soho, where seven Royal Princes and Princesses were baptized, as well as numberless members of the aristocracy resident there in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. They are much indebted to the contributors of Bookplates also, and would ask for their continued assistance, it being a feature started forty years ago for the first time in any periodical.

The EDITORS again ask to be favoured with contributions from subscribers of family history, accompanied by arms and autographs; also of any interesting registers, many requiring printing to rescue them from destruction either from age or carelessness.

This ancient Court was reconstructed by Statute 3 Henry VII., cap. 1, with the special object of exterminating the giving of liveries, signes, tokens, and reteyndres, etc., maintenances, taking of money by jurryes and other factious devices, which had greatly increased during the Wars of the Roses, and had been so organized as to be dangerous to the Realm. The leading nobility of both coloured Roses drew around them vast companies of retainers. In ordinary cases no payment beyond certain small gifts seems to have passed—nothing that could be called hire! The one side sought powerful protection, or they would be plundered by both parties; the other aimed at an army of partisans to overwhelm the opposite party; and even the course of Justice was overawed—the Courts were packed, and any liveried servants acquitted. It is plain to see that such combinations could easily solidify into rebellion, and were subversive of all Government.

The reasons given in the prelude to the Act shew a state of social disturbance that must at all costs be stamped out. The officials appointed were the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treasurer, and the Keeper of the Privy Seal, calling to their aid a Bishop, a temporal lord of King's Council, the two chief Justices of King's Bench and Common Pleas, or, in their absence, two other Justices, and others of the Privy Council. Their jurisdiction covered Riots, maintenances, Perjuries, and all such misdemeanors as were not sufficiently provided for by the Common Law.

Hudson, in his "Treatise on the Star Chamber," says that sometimes as many as 40 persons occupied the Bench of this most honourable Court.

By the 21 Henry VIII., cap. 20, some needed amendments and extensions were made, and it was declared that the Bishop, Lords of Council and Justices were only there to assist with their advice.

After many profitable years the great powers of this august Court came to be misdirected into oppression, and so by Statute 16 Charles I., cap. 10, this Court, "and all Jurisdiction, Power, and authority thereto belonging are from and after 1 Aug. 1641 clearly and absolutely dissolved and determined"; but for many years afterwards the great benefits it had worked were pointed to in grateful remembrance.

* Communicated by GEO. GRAZEBROOK, Esq., F.S.A.

When writing his Treatise of Government for Charles II., shortly after the Restoration, the great William Cavendish (created Duke of Newcastle in 1664) looked back approvingly on its career, and says that after it was erected there was "so much peace and quietness to your Majesty's people, as any man might have rid with a riding rod all through your Kindgdom without any trouble or molestation to him, so little use there was of a sword." (Letters and documents at Welbeck by S. A. Strong.)

This short account seems necessary to the understanding of our Suit.

Appeals might come from any Court, and the process was by Bill of Complaint (or Petition) and Answers, after which witnesses were orally examined ("ore tenus"). Therefore, excepting the Bills and Answers, no records of the trials ever did exist, beyond the decrees of Court, and there was no appeal. These decrees disappeared many years ago! In the Report of a Committee of the Lords in 1719 it is stated that "the last notice of them that could be got was that they were in a house in S[t] Bartholomew Close, London," and it is feared they have been destroyed.

Star Chamber Proceedings, Henry VIII.

To the King our Soveraigne Lord,

Humbly compleyning shewith unto your Excellente maiestie your humble and daily Orator Richard Barker of hoo next Estderham in the Countie of Norfolk, gent. That whereas Thomas Warner commenced an acc'on upon the case afore John Baldwyn, Knight, and his fellowes justices of our Soveraigne lorde the Kynge of his benche in the terme of Saint michell (Oct.—Nov. 1541) in the xxxiij[rd] year of the reigne of our Soveraigne lord the Kynge in whiche said acc'on he named your said Orator by the name of Richard Barker late of hoo next Estderham in the countie aforsaid, yeoman. Unto which said accion your said Orator made aunswere that at the tyme of the comencemente of the said accion he was gentleman and so ever sythens called reputed and taken, and so traversed the mater saiying without that that your Orator the same Day or ever after that was yoman in maner as the same Warner in his Writt did suppose. and herupon they were at issue and a Jury sumoned to appere afore Edward Mountague, Knight, and Thomas Bromley, justice of Assise in the Countie of Norfolk, the names of whome hereafter ensue William Lambe, gent., hugh hastynges, gent., Edward Dogett, gent., William Smalpece, gent., Edmund Gogney, William Cook, Richard Wright, John Hobson, Robert Seman, Nicholas Barham, William Spiney and Thomas Cowper. So it is gracious Soveraign lord that notwithstonding your said Orator did shew and declare sufficiente and lawfull matter as well of records as otherwise to prove your said orator to be named accepted and taken as a gentleman aswell afore the commencemente of the said acc'on as ever sythens and upon gevinge of the said evydence it was thought aswell by the Justice of Assise as by others there then present that they could doo no lesse then to have passed with your said Orator, yet the said William Lambe and thother of the Jury afore named nothinge regardinge their othe in the said evydence geven and shewed on the behalfe of your said Orator and havinge no evidence geven on thother side passed with the said Warner and gave their verdicte that the said Richard was yoman and not gentleman contrary to all trouthe right and conscience and to the grete encoraginge of others semblably mynding to be perjured if spedy remedy be not the rather provyded on this behalfe. In consideracon whereof and for reformacon to be had for their manyfest periury may it please your highnes to awarde your graces Writte of Subpena to be directed to the said William Lamb and thother of the jury afore named Comanding them by the same personally to appere afore your highnes and your moste honorable Councell at Westminster at a certen day and under a certen peyne by your highnes to be lymyted then and there to answere the premysses. And furder to be ordered therein according to your lawes and Statutes in such case provided. And your said Orator shall daily pray to god for your most noble and roiall Estate longe to endure.

On the back of the Petition is a memorandum :—" Resp(ondeat) in XV. Trin.," that is, May—June.

And prayen as they the said defendaunts have prayed.

A short statement will make the above clear. Thomas Warner issued a writ against Richard Barker, "yeoman," in the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, Michaelmas 33 Henry VIII. (Oct. and Nov. 1541). Richard Barker met this by a plea of Abatement of Misnomer, as he was a "gentleman" and improperly described.

This point was referred to the district for decision at the Norfolk Assizes, and came on at Norwich Castle Michaelmas 34 Henry VIII. (Oct. and Nov. 1542), when William Lambe and eleven others were sworn as a Jury. Their sentence not being satisfactory to Barker he put them into the Star Chamber for perjury for a false verdict, and it was, I suppose, taken in Michaelmas Term 1544.

I have made every enquiry in hopes of recovering the suit at the Assizes. Mr. J. C. Tingey, F.S.A., has very obligingly looked, but could find no Assize Records among the City of Norwich Muniments. They should by rights be preserved by the Court of Assize for that Circuit, but Mr. Denman, the Clerk of Assize, has most kindly had a search made for me and reports that their earliest Assize Rolls do not extend back to so early a date. We cannot, therefore, recover any confirmatory evidences, and so must make the most we can out of the Bill and Answer.

I would begin by remarking that I have, perhaps always, found the Bill of Complaint give the clearest account of the circumstances. The Orator tells plainly what he says happened: if his statement is untrue or inexact, such points are at once traversed and exposed by the Defendants and are then in dispute, and every item not so disputed is admitted to be true.

The opening portion of William Lambe's Answer is in the usual conventional form always found with slight variations. This document was drawn by Counsel learned in the Law, and what is not contradicted is acknowledged.

Taking the points as they come, in the matter of the Duke of Bokenham I can give nothing for or against.

"Small lerning" and "not sene in blazing of Arms"—the object in introducing these is very plain. Juries were punishable in two ways: for "perjury" if they gave a wilfully false verdict, or for "crassa ignorantia" if from that supposed cause they declared what was not true; and here we descry their Counsel trying to escape the penalty for perjury by suggesting they were simple ignorant men and based their verdict on common report "for that that yt ys comonlye syne" (said). Perhaps I ought to explain that at this date Juries were obliged to give a verdict of some sort. I quote a case sufficiently near to our date. In the trial The Bishop of Norwich v. Earl of Kent (Year Book 14 Henry VII., 1498-9) it is declared that in any case still the Jury would be bound to give a verdict, and this was how the Law continued to be read until the well-known case of Bushell in 1670.*

Then it refers to the marriage of Barker with "the syster of Sir Walter Luke, Knyght, late dyscessed." We must take into account what is of course omitted, that Sir Walter was a Justice of Common Pleas, and left an only son, Nicholas Luke, who was then a Baron of the Exchequer (Patent 14 April 31 Henry VIII., 1540). Their pedigree is recorded in the "Visitation of Hunts, 1613" (Camden Society, vol. xliii.), and in the "Visitation of Bedfordshire" (Harleian Society, vol. xix.). It must have given Barker some social standing if his brother-in-law and nephew were both Judges.

By referring to our splendid Collection of Brasses at the Society of Antiquaries I am able to give the inscription from the Church of Cople in Bedfordshire, and I suppose from the term "late dyscessed" that the Star Chamber suit came on for trial at Michaelmas 1544:—

"Here lyeth Sir Walter Luke, Knyght, one of the Justices of the Pleas holden | before the most excellent Prynce Kyng Henry the Eyght. And dame

* See Vaughan's "Reports," p. 135; also a very interesting account of it in Proceedings Society of Antiquaries, 24 Nov. 1887, which has since been separately published, "How I found the Bunyan Warrant," by W. G. Thorpe, F.S.A., London, 1890.

The facts are shortly these:—By the New Conventicles Act, 1670, the Quakers' Meeting Houses were all closed, but on each Sunday the congregations met outside the doors and waited quietly for the usual duration of their services. This the Lord Mayor called a tumultuous assembly and, when he found that committing to prison did not stop it, he indicted at the Old Bailey William Penn and Mead, two leading Quakers—Bushell was foreman of the Jury which refused to convict—when the Recorder fined them each 40 marks and committed them to prison until it was paid. Bushell and his friends, however, brought up the conviction by Habeas Corpus before the Court of Common Pleas, when it was quashed and the dictum laid down that no Juryman can be fined or imprisoned for finding a verdict "contra plenam et manifestam evidentiam," nor against the direction of a Judge. Since then the independence of the Jury has gone on growing. Not many years ago they might be locked up and starved into a decision: one man with a "crank" and a strong constitution could enforce his verdict, and in nature we see that the lower grade of animals with the least intellect can exist longest without food! Now we seem to be going too far in the other direction, and at the expense of the unfortunate litigants a second trial of the case has to be gone through!

Counsel had to make the best of it for his clients, and these disparaging references to his social status really aim at the grant of arms which they could not deny.

Now the strictest perhaps of all the regulations as to the granting of arms required close enquiries to be made into the honest and good reputation of the applicant before he was ennobled, and next to that, that he had sufficient means to keep up the state of a gentleman, the very words used in the Answer. So Counsel at any rate knew the limits placed upon the granting of arms.

Charles Brandon, Earl Marshal (1524; he resigned in 1533, so we will say about) 1529, issued the following regulations for the College of Heralds:—They were to grant arms only to "persons which be of good and honest reputation able to mayntayne the state of a gentleman," and further, "shall not geve nor graunt arms to any vyle or dishonest occupation in any wyse." Then follow the charges for grants, each according to the income of the applicant (who was worthy of such distinction):—"Every temporall man having 100 marks by the yeare in land or goods £6 13*s.* 6*d.*; of them which be worth in moveable goods 1000 marks or above, £6; of them that be worth in lands and goods 1000 marks, £5 (see my Earl Marshal's Court, pp. 38-9. This is from Anstis' Collection of Heralds, vol. ii., fol. 552, a MS. in the College of Arms. The original rough copy of this MS. is in the British Museum, but its arrangement is very confused).

These were the rules laid down only some fourteen years before Counsel drew his Answer! He then proceeds to jocularly describe what the arms were, and thus more fully acknowledges the grant!—"a hound barking," etc. I have searched but cannot trace the grant, and suppose that, as with many others, the records are lost. In Edmondson's "Dictionary" a coat is given for Barker of Norfolk (and Burke has embodied it in his "General Armoury"):—Or, a chevron Azure frettée of the field between three hurts, on a chief sable a hound passant Argent between two mullets or. Is it possible that these could be what the Answer seeks to caricature as belonging to Richard Barker?

The whole issue between them as laid down in the Petition was that Richard had a coat of arms, and so was entitled to the rank of gentleman, and therefore must be so described in the Writ. Here is what Stephen's "Commentary on Blackstone" says (vol. iii., p. 16):—"The rest are tradesmen, artificers, and labourers, who as well as all others must, in pursuance of the Statute 1 Henry V., cap. 5, be styled by the name and addition of their estate, degree or mystery, and the place to which they belong, or where they have been conversant, in all indictments."

NOTE.—"Turner of Bowls, Treen dysshes," etc. This is what we now call a whitesmith or maker of wooden articles, which in former times was a large and important trade. In a very interesting Inquisition 21 Richard II., on the death of the Earl of Warwick, a list was returned of goods in the Castle of Shrewardine containing, together with tapestries, silver and pewter plate, and other interesting articles, "448 disshes and Platell' de fuist" (i.e., of wood—"fustier," one who works in wood (Cotgrave), "cele riviere avoit un pont de fust" (Romance of Merlin, l. 118, Thirteenth-century—Toynbee's "Specimens of Old French"). It is startling to reflect for how much cleanliness, comfort, and refinement we are indebted to the person who first introdnced the use of crockery!

"Veridictum"—another vulgar joke which, however, conveys a suggested argument which we can hardly think would commend itself to this most dignified Court; but we must expect laboured jocularities, they were characteristic of the age, although loathsome to us who are accustomed to the opalescent coruscations of what we now call Wit.

Fenland Notes and Queries. Vol. V., Part 60. January 1904. Peterborough : George C. Caster, Market Place.

THIS local journal still keeps up a full account of the drainage of the Great Level, under Charles I., Sole Undertaker 1639. The King was soon at work, the citizens of London having offered to pay his Majesty £16,000 for his 12,000 acres in the Isle ; but after a long delay many were ruined. There is an account of Richard Howland being nominated by the Lord Treasurer to be made Dean, upon the death of William Latymer in 1583, and the Queen replying that "she thought him worthy of a better place ;" however, the next year Howland became Bishop. The old family of Vernatti is next referred to as among the early drainers of the Fens. The Index to Vol. V. is included with this Part.

The Journal of the Ex Libris Society. Vol. XIII., Part 12, and Parts 1 and 2, Vol. XIV. December 1903 to February 1904. London : A. and C. Black, Soho Square.

THE graceful plate of Robert Day, J.P., F.S.A., M.R.I.A., is the frontispiece for the December Part, and is cited as a Masonic example, and of which Mr. Day gives several, amongst them being his own installation as Knight of the Eagle and Pelican, Prime Grand Rose Croix, and Eminent Preceptor. There are five plates given of masonic bookplates, lodgers, and foreign plates. The Part has also the bookplate of Robert Udney, drawn by R. Cosway, R.A., the curtain before certain medallions being drawn by a cupid, revealing portraits of Rubens, Vandyck, etc.

The January Part opens with a Memorial to the late Sir Albert Woods, and has four examples of arms with portraits attached, the last being that of Lord de Tabley. Miss Frances Rodd's and Dr. Robert Gourlay's plates are also given.

The February Part again gives a few portrait bookplates, the one of a Naval Chaplain, Edward Lewton Penny, being very effective. The masonic bookplates are also continued, and two excellent plates are given designed by Mr. J. R. Blake. Four samples are also given of plates engraved by Miss Marjorie Murray, the one of John Fischer Williams being a homely cottage with sundial in front. Altogether a good Part.

The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography. Vol. XI., No. 3. January 1904. Virginia Historical Society, Richmond, U.S.A.

IN the present Number there is an article dealing with the Huguenot colony, King William Parish, in Virginia, with extracts from the Vestry Book commencing 1707, giving particulars of the facilities offered to them by King William to settle there. Laws were made granting unusual privileges to them, being admitted to citizenship immediately on arrival and exempt from taxation, and 10,000 acres given for their settlement. For many years after they preserved their individuality, and it was not until the latter half of the eighteenth century that they began to lose their distinctive character through intermarriage ; but it is noted that their posterity have ever since been found among the leaders of America.

A Paper dealing with the site of old "James Citty," 1607—98, accompanied with a Map of the period, by S. H. Yonge, of the United States Engineers' Department, whose researches had led him to the conclusion that the original site of the town, or more properly speaking settlement, is different to that usually given by other authorities. The question is an interesting one to Americans, who look upon Jamestown as the cradle of their race, for there the first footing was gained by the Anglo-Saxon on the eastern shores of America, and the first church and house were erected. It is pleasing to observe that every effort is being made to preserve the antiquities of the place.

There is a continuation of the accounts of the passing of the Moravians through Virginia, and further extracts from the Virginian Records. An amusing sentence was passed on an attorney, part of which being that he "stand at the court door with a paper on his head expressing his offence," and another case was settled in a curious manner: a man having some goods stolen by an Indian, the Court gave the man power to detain in custody the next Indian that should come to his house, until the stolen goods should be returned.

The genealogy of the families of Bruce (with five portraits), Brookes, and Herndon are continued, together with several others. It is of interest to notice that the compiler points out that he has not been able to trace the name of Herndon as a surname in England, although he has consulted all the authorities known to him.

There are several other items of great interest, the whole Number being a most excellent one.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record. Vol. XXXV. No. 1. January 1904. Society's Office: 226 West 58th Street, New York, U.S.A.

A SERIES of articles commences with this new Volume, which may be of interest to genealogists on this side; they will consist of a list of the Loyalists who settled in New Brunswick after the American Revolution, and who numbered about 10,000. The introduction forms an interesting account of their settlement, and the British Government is commended for its generosity and promptitude, considering the difficulties of communication and transportation. Grants of land were made as rapidly as surveys could be carried out, supplies of lumber for constructing temporary homes were delivered, and full rations were granted to Loyalists and Refugees for the first year, half rations for the second year, and one-third rations for the third year. In the meantime a commission had been appointed by the British Government to hear the claims of the Loyalists for compensation in consequence of the war.

Considerable space is given to Church Records, viz.: the Church of Christ in Salem, Congregational Church of Greenfield, and those of the Amenia Church. There are biographical notes of the late Mr. William Earle Dodge (whose portrait forms the frontispiece), one of the founders of the Union League Club, and of the Rev. David Cole, D.D., a minister of the Reformed Church, who was devoted to the study of genealogy and local history, and was the author of a considerable amount of literature.

Family history claims several items, among which the accounts of the Freer Family and of Edward Fuller are continued from the last volume. There is also a list of the descendants of John Hance, one of the original settlers under the Monmouth Patent of Shrewsbury, N.J., 1656, down to the present time.

Lucie Boullier, b. 24 April 1739. — Judith Elizabeth Boullier, b. 13 Aug. 1741.

According to Haag's "La France Protestante" (Tome IV., 804), "Constantin de Courcy, Sieur de Magny-la-champagne, réfugiè de Falaise en 1685, ayant essayé de passer à l'étranger avec Anne Dumont sa femme et avec Pierre Daumesnil, sieur de Boisdaune, tous trois furent arrêtès et emprisonnés à Caen. Ils se convertirent pour échapper à une condamnation." But they seem to have ultimately made good their escape, as "Constantine de Courcy, son of John and Anne de Courcy, born at Magny in Normandy," obtained his Act of Naturalization along with Peter de Combebrune in 1700, and Philip Du Mesnil Boisdaune appears in connection with the latter's will in 1731. He himself died in 1737, leaving wife and son settled in Sussex. His brother Louis Henri Du Mesnil Ligneres appears to have conformed and remained in Normandy, but he had an uncle, Andrew Costard de Boismorel, settled in London, who died s.p. in 1738, and another uncle, John Costard de la Moraisiere, settled in Amsterdam.

CAPES FAMILY: LONGEVITY.

The following note in the handwriting of Joseph Capes, whose autograph defaces the title-page, occurs upon the end papers of a copy of "The Visions of Quevedo," printed in 1702:—

JONES PEDIGREE.

I shall be greatly indebted for any additions and corrections as to the above family of Jones and its alliances. The Parish Registers of Llanddew, near Brecon, are missing at the period that they might avail me for discovery of the ancestry of Evan Jones, who owned Fforddfawr in Llanddew, but he may not have resided there, as in 1767 it appears that the house and small property were occupied by a tenant. I should much value information as to the families of Havard (Jane, wife of Evan Jones, is given as a daughter of Joshua Havard of Llanvillo, near Brecon), Ellington, and Pridmore. I have extracts from many wills of families of Cheselden of, in Leicestershire, Leicester, Burrough (sometimes spelt Burrow), and Somerby, and, in Rutlandshire, of Glaston, Langham, Manton, and Ridlington, but I fail to trace any relationship, which I am told it is believed existed, between the families of Cheselden and Pridmore.

Rackheath, Norwich. REGINALD STEWART BODDINGTON.

ABSTRACT OF WILL OF EDWARD REYNOLDS.

In the Name of God, Amen. I, Edward Reynolds of New House Grange, co. Leic^{r}, Esq^{r}, being of sound mind, etc. I give to my daughter Hannah £500. I give to my daughter Mary £500. To my daughter Elianor £500. To my son Thomas £10, he having received his portion of £500. To my son Joshua £10, he having received £490. To my son Samuel £10, he having received £490. My marriage settlement made in 1687 upon my marriage with their mother. To my son George £100, he having received £400. To my son Richard £50, he having received £450. To my son Edward my messuage, etc., in Harrold, co. Bedford, which I purchased of M^{r} Faldo. My copyhold estate in Pavenham, co. Bedford, late in possession of my uncle John Alston, and my messuage, etc., called New House in Merrivall, co. Warwick. I give to each of my brothers and sisters, whether by birth or marriage, and to my cousin Edward Barwell of Marston Trussell, co. North'ton, gent., a ring of ten shillings value. And I appoint my loving brother Thomas Reynolds and my said cousin Edward Barwell executors. In witness whereof, etc. (Signed) EDW^{D} REYNOLDS.

Witnesses: Doro. Brampton, Farmery Law, Tho. Raye Durd.

Whereas since the making of this my last will, etc., I have paid to the Rev^{d} M^{r} William Vincent upon his marriage with my daughter Hannah £500, and to my son George £100, I direct that that part of my will which relates to the said payments shall be null and void, etc. 17 July 1732.

(Signed) EDW^{D} REYNOLDS.

Witnesses: Hen. Barwell, Rebecca Breton.

Will dated 19 Nov. 1731; proved at London 2 Oct. 1733 by the executors named. (P.C.C., 270, Price.)

I shall be much indebted for information as to the ancestry and descendants of this Edward Reynolds. Did his brother Thomas Reynolds named in his will marry? His daughter Hannah married 10 February 1731 (Licence Archdeaconry of Leicester, 7th of same month) at Sheepy, Leicestershire, as his second wife, Rev. William Vincent, Rector of Sheepy and Radcliffe, and had issue. Their daughter Elizabeth, baptized at Sheepy 6 December 1732, married Rev. Thomas Gresley, D.D., Rector and Patron of Seale, Leicestershire. See Baronetages and "History of the Gresleys of Drakelowe," compiled by Falconer Madan, M.A., Fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford. Hannah, widow of Rev. William Vincent, married secondly (Licence Archdeaconry of Leicester, 27th January 1742; to marry at Sibston) Rev. Silvester Vincent, Rector of Sheepy. See a Pedigree of Vincent, "Mis. Gen. et Her.," Third Series, Vol. I., pp. 10—13. Is there at the present time any descendant in the male line of Edward Reynolds?

Re SHALCROSS OF SHALLCROSS, DERBYSHIRE.

To the Editor of "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica."

Sir,

The late Mr. Earwaker, in the first volume of "East Cheshire," mentioned that he had a pedigree of the above family, compiled by himself. This has apparently never been published. Can any of your readers inform me where this pedigree is? Mr. Earwaker's MSS., etc., are now in the Grosvenor Museum, Chester, and although the officials there have very kindly looked through the collections (which unfortunately are not fully indexed), they have been unable to find this pedigree.

Perhaps some reader could also enlighten me upon the following point. A Philip Shalcross was born about 1735, and was brought up at, or near, Taxal, Cheshire. His birth is not mentioned in the Registers of Taxal Parish. I should be glad to know the date of birth and where entered; also any particulars of his parentage, etc.

Any unpublished information respecting members of this family, whether of Derbyshire, Cheshire, Hertfordshire, or London, will be gladly received.

POWELL OF POOL-HALL.

I should be much obliged if any correspondent could give me information which would take this pedigree farther back or bring it down to the present day.

Pool-Hall is a very ancient house in the parish of Llanvetherine in the county of Monmouth, so called as from Powell Hall. It has long been let as a farm-house.

Reviews.

The Journal of the Ex Libris Society. Vol. XIV., Parts 3, 4, and 5. London : A. and C. Black, Soho Square.

In the March number there is an interesting account of some Marryat Bookplates, with illustrations of several plates, including that of Captain Marryat, the well-known author, and it also gives a short pedigree shewing the relationship of the various owners.

The April number has an impression from the original copper of the Bookplate of Charles Hanbury Williams, M.P. for Monmouthshire 1735—47. This part is well illustrated, but, excepting some Legal and Jewish Bookplates, are mostly modern examples.

Among the contents of the May number there is an article on the Bookplates of Swire of Cononley, illustrated with three heraldic plates, and giving some genealogical notes of the family from 1627.

The June number is just to hand, and is up to its usual excellent standard, and contains an article on Modern Bookplates. There is an excellent plate of Lewis Hainsworth as a frontispiece.

We notice that the Annual Meeting and Exhibition are to be held at 20 Hanover Square, in the rooms of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, on the 28th and 29th June, and the Annual Dinner will take place after the Meeting, at the "Florence," Rupert Street, W.

Obituary.

We regret to have to inform our readers of the death of Viscount Powerscourt, which took place on 5th June, after a few days' illness, at his house in Portland Place, W. The archæological and genealogical world have both lost an ardent admirer, and his two works, the Wingfield Memoirs, and the one on the History of Powerscourt, both issued in editions de luxe and beautifully illustrated, will associate him well with the literary world.

other messuages in or near the same court in the tenure of Richard Pearse, hosier, and Andrew Doherty, Linen draper, which £25 is in satisfaction of £500 which by his will James Edington, late of Melkington, gent., brother of the said Elizabeth Edington, gave to her, the testator being his executor. To Elizabeth Bell of Wooler in Northumberland, spinster, £20 a year for her life out of the same tenements, which is due on a bond dated in or about July 1762 to be paid after the death of the said James Edington, to be paid out of the above tenements and four others in or near Hayes Court in the occupation of John Solden, peruke maker, Jacob Maurer, Victualler, Mary Legrand, pastrycook, and John Bird, fishmonger. Gives the said messuages to testator's son in law the Rev. Samuel Smith, D.C.L., of S. Margaret, Westminster, and to son in law William Wright of S. Ann, Westminster, gent., in trust for the benefit of testator's wife Joan Jackson for her life; and after, those in the occupation of testator, R. Pearse, and A. Doherty to son John Jackson and his heirs, and the other four to said sons in law, all subject to the aforesaid payments. Son to have the use of testator's house to continue to carry on the business now carried on by him and the testator, having taken said son into partnership on or about 20 Oct. 1756. Testator is entitled for life by the wills of his late sisters Mary and Sarah Jackson to the interest of £1125 Bank Stock, and can dispose of it by will to be sold to pay legacies to testator's children after wife's death. All plate, furniture, linen, etc., both in town and country to wife. Has preferred daughters Mary and Anna in marriage, viz., £1000 with Anna to Samuel Smith and £1000 to be paid at testator's death, and the like amount with Mary married to William Wright. Also £1000 to advance son Richard in the trade of a grocer; now makes the portions of sons Richard, Samuel, and Henry Jackson and daughter Rebecca Jackson equal to £2000 each. To Mr Harry Godde, Miss Frances Godde, and her sisters Sarah and Elizabeth Godde, the Rev. Mr Sackville Bail and his wife, George Wagner and his wife, all a ring. To the trustees of the Charity Children of S. Ann, Westminster, £25 for the use of such children. To sons in law Samuel Smith and William Wright the farm house, barn, stable, garden, etc., in Wilhampstead, co. In Memory of | Lieut. General RICHARD ENGLAND | Lieut. Governor of Plymouth | and Colonel of the 5th Regiment of Foot. | He departed this Life on the 7th of November 1812 | in the 68th Year of his Age | 48 of which were devoted to the Service | of his Country. | In token of sincere esteem | for the many Virtues, which endeared him | to his Family, and all who knew him | This Tablet is erected | by his afflicted Widow and Children.

Sacred | To the Memory of | Dr Bland, M.D., S.A.S. | of Leicester Square, | who died on the 29th of June, 1816 | in the 76th Year of his Age.
This Monument was erected as a token of | affection by his Daughter Sophia.

The gentleman commemorated by this tablet was Robert Bland, the son of an attorney at King's Lynn, and received his professional education in London Hospitals. In 1778 he obtained the degree of M.D. from the University of S. Andrew's, and was admitted a licentiate of the College of Physicians on 30 Sept. 1786. He acquired a large practice in London as an accoucheur, a department of his profession in which he obtained a high reputation, and wrote a number of professional articles. He married and had several children, of whom Robert took the degree of B.A. from Pembroke College, Cambridge; taking Holy Orders he held several Curacies, but died 12 March 1825, leaving a widow and nine children. William, another son of Dr. Bland, born 5 Nov. 1789, followed his father's profession, and finally settled in Sydney, Australia, where he became best known as a statesman, and died there 21 July 1868. (Carlisle's "History of the Family of Bland" and "Dictionary of National Biography" for fuller particulars.)

Ann's, called the Bull's Head Alehouse, and leaseholds in Long Acre, Oxford Street, and Audley Street. Bequest to Coach and Harness Makers' Company. To the Charity School for poor boys and girls in S. Ann, Soho, £100; to the like school in S. Martin's in the Fields £50, and a like amount to the School of

* This street has now been merged into Charing Cross Road, and the "Bull's Head" alehouse has undergone many vicissitudes since the above date. The house was still known as above in 1889, but about that time the tenant was convicted and had his licence endorsed, but appears to have sold it; nevertheless, by the expedient of using his licence of the previous year at the transfer to the new tenant, which was clear from any endorsement of the conviction, and through an oversight on the part of the authorities, it was allowed to pass; but, upon the discovery of the trick at a later date, it led to the rule being made that all old licences were to be given up at the transfer. The name of the house was after this known as the "Tam O'Shanter," and subsequently—the adjoining premises having been added to the property—it became known as the "Palace Tavern," the name it is known by at the present time.

S. Giles in the Fields. Mr William Vendon, coach and coach harness maker, son of Edward Vendon, late of Hart Street, Bloomsbury, dec., £300. Various sums of large amount are named as lent on mortgage to various people.

SOME NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY.

To the genealogist a pedigree is of especial interest if it concerns a place-name, and connects the family which bears it with the place of its origin. Though links are missing or as yet unproved in the chain of their descent, there is not the least doubt that the family of Acworth, whose history is the subject of these Notes, came from Yorkshire, and were first so called from the place now known as Ackworth. For in early times the name is found in that county and in no other; it belongs moreover to but one family at the present day, and according to all the evidence it has never belonged to more than one. It may here be mentioned that the "k" now always interpolated in the spelling of the place Acworth is incorrect, if some of the oldest records are to be taken as authority.†

The earliest occurrence that has as yet been found of the adoption of the name appears in the publications of the Yorkshire Archæological Society, wherein John de Ackewrde is shewn to be one of the jurors in an inquisition post-mortem on Emma Wasthose held on 13 February 1250. The same society has printed in full the Poll Tax Roll for Yorkshire of 2 Richard II. (1379), in which the name again occurs some half-dozen times in the West Riding, with the uncertain and varying spelling of that day. But before this latter date it is found also in other classes of records, still, however, in the north only, and it recurs there up to near the end of the fifteenth century. About 1420 a member of the family appears to have migrated to Bedfordshire, and thereafter the name has to be looked for chiefly in the south. The remaining occurrences of it as yet found in Yorkshire are as follows:—

William de Acworth mentioned as Receiver at Wakefield of the Earl of Lancaster on 13 June 1323 and 16 June 1324. (Close Rolls.)

Henry de Akeworth receives pardon in consideration of his going beyond the seas in the King's Company 30 October 1339. (Patent Rolls.)

Adam de Ackeworth and Beatrice his wife receive licence for the alienation in mortmain of two messuages, 20 acres of land, and 6*s*. of rent in the town of Pontefract, Preston Jakelyn, Carleton, and Sutton-by-Feribrygg, to a chaplain to celebrate divine service daily in the Church of All Saints, Pontefract, for the good estate of the said Adam and Beatrice his wife, for their souls after death, and the souls of their fathers and mothers. (Patent Rolls, 23 November 1340.)

Roger de Acworth, Chaplain, and others grant to Robert Davy, Vicar of the Church of Birstalle, and Richard Lyversege, Chaplain, of a messuage in the new market of Pontefract, with its garden extending from "le Frerelane" to "le malfagate." Witnesses, Peter Bayly and John Roller, bailiffs of the said town, and others (named). Morrow of the Annunciation, 16 Richard II. (1392). (Ancient Deeds.)

Robert Acworth of Hymmesworth grants, 13 December 1433, to Thomas Harthorp of the same, Chaplain, a cottage in the town of Hymmesworth between the Church on the west and the Grange of the said Robert on the east. (Publications of Yorkshire Archæological Association.)

Towards the end of the fifteenth century the family seems to have died out in the north, the last occurrences there that have been found of the name being in the will dated 8 February 1497-8, proved 8 April 1498, of Roger Akworth of York, gentleman, which is registered in P.C. York, vol. v., No. 120. This Roger Acworth directs "my body to be buried in the Choir of the Church of St. Nicholas in Mekilgate under the Pulpit." He leaves a wife Alice, residuary legatee, and daughter Agnes; legacies to the high altar, thirteen chaplains, the parish clerk, the paupers in the Hospital of St. Thomas the Martyr, the lepers in the suburbs of York, the recluse in Clementhorp, the house of St. Trinity in Mikilgate, etc.; legacies to the fabric of the said choir (Mikilgate); "to the vicar of the said church my best toga with a hood in the name of a mortuary;" legacies to clerks, the Friars Minors of York, and the sisters in the Hospital of St. Nicholas without Walmegate Barr.

† The persistence with which people insert a "k" is such that it is a little surprising to find there are in America two places named Acworth. One is in New Hampshire, and its name is said to have been given to it by a former Governor of the State. The other is in Georgia, and was so named by a civil engineer, a surveyor for the railroad which was being built in or about 1855. It was a few years later one of the stopping places of Sheridan's army on its march through the Southern States at the close of the War of Secession.

In 1416 and 1418 there are entries in the Calendars of Feet of Fines for Bedfordshire shewing purchases of lands by William Acworth:—

Final agreement made at Westminster on the morrow of the Ascension, 4 Henry V., between William Acworth, plaintiff, and John Waleys of Glynde, Esq., and Johanna his wife, deforciants, of a messuage and lands in Biscote, Luton, and Lymbury, etc., for which the said William gave them a hundred marks of silver. (Feet of Fines, Easter, 4 Henry V.)

Final agreement made at Westminster on the morrow of St. John the Baptist, 6 Henry V., between William Acworth, Esq., plaintiff, and Ralph Bussh, Esq., and Eleanor his wife, deforciants, of half the manor of Byscote, with the appurtenances which Elizabeth, who was the wife of Baldwin Berford, Knt., holds for the term of her life, and they grant that after the death of the said Elizabeth, etc., for which grant the aforesaid William gives them £40 sterling. (Feet of Fines, Trinity, 6 Henry V.)

From a case in the King's Bench it appears that William Acworth was also seised in 1423 of other lands in Bedfordshire or neighbouring counties, his title to which is disputed (Coram Rege Roll, 649, Memb. 97, Trinity, 1 Henry 6). And in 1424 he is feoffee with others of the manor of Aygnelles (Rolls Series of Chronicles, Whethamstede's, St. Albans).

Evidence of William's parentage has not yet been found, but that he came from Yorkshire there can be no doubt, for, as already said, the name up till that time existed in no other county. He is presumably also the same William Acworth who appears in the Parliament Rolls in the petition dated 1421 of Margaret, late the wife of Roger le Scroope, Knight, deceased. According to the petition he was seised with others, probably as trustees for Margaret, of the manor of Hameldene. The Scropes being a Yorkshire family the indication is strong of Acworth's connection with that county, and other evidences of northern connection continue long after this first advent of Acworths into Bedfordshire.

As before stated, the family name Acworth appears to have died out in Yorkshire before the end of the fifteenth century, and with the exception of one or two early occurrences of it in Lincolnshire and elsewhere it is thereafter found only in the south. Its continuance up to the present time is due to the line which settled in Bedfordshire, failing which it would now be extinct. The earlier steps in the descent of the Bedfordshire Acworths have not yet been proved, but the writer of these notes has good hope that evidence of them, as well as positive proof of Yorkshire origin, will yet be found, when it may be worth while to publish a complete history of the family, and include in it abstracts of wills and other documents which it is not proposed to give here. In these pages a connected pedigree will only be attempted from a later member of the family, and the assumption that he was a descendant of the William Acworth of 1416 must rest on the fact that he was possessed of the lands in Biscot, Luton, Lymbury, which the latter had bought. Before beginning the connected pedigree mention may be made of some occurrences of the names of supposed members of his family earlier in the line.

Humphrey Acworth* appears in Fuller's "Worthies" among the gentry of Bedfordshire, and the name may be seen on the roll from which Fuller must have taken it (Patent Roll, Part 2, 12 Henry VI.). In 1437 and 1438 his name occurs with others in grant and demise of a tenement in Dunstable and a parcel of land called Lorkynesacre (Ancient Deeds).

William Acworth appears in the Parliament Rolls in 1461, when he and many others are attainted and convicted of high treason, and sentenced to forfeit their estates. He is described as late of Luton, Beds, Squyer, and has had with his fellow-sufferers the misfortune of being on the losing side in the bloody battle of Towton field.

John Acworth is the last of these disconnected names found as yet. On 12 May 1474 a licence is granted to Thomas, Bishop of Lincoln, John Rotheram, and John Acworth, Esquires, and others, parishioners of the Parish Church of St. Mary, Luton, to found a fraternity or guild by name of the fraternity or guild of Holy Trinity, Luton, and to found a chantry and acquire lands, etc., in augmentation of the sustenance of five clerks chanting matins, mass, and vespers in the said Church. By P.S. and for £72 paid in the hanaper (Calendar of Patent Rolls), John Acworth, as master of the Guild, appears in early Chancery Proceedings (Ref. 35/74), and John Ekworth of Byscot, who in 1493 is admitted with Elizabeth his wife and George his eldest son an honorary member of the Fraternity of St. Albans, is probably the same man (Cott. MSS., Nero, D 7, fol. 79).

Allusion may here be made to another name, though there is no evidence that it belongs to the Bedfordshire line. Thomas Acworth was in the household of Elizabeth of York, Queen of Henry VII. The position he held in it is shewn by the following among several similar entries in her Privy Purse Expenses:—

"A. D. 1502. It'm the viijth day of July to Thomas Acworth for the expenses of the Quene's stable . . . . Lvj li. iij ob."

In a diligent search made through every class of public records, from the earliest times till now, for occurrences of the name Acworth, so few have been found that it is possible to make allusion to all of them even in the short space of these pages. With the intention of doing so, Thomas of the household of Elizabeth of York is given a place here. And indeed, though there is nothing at present to identify him, evidence may yet be forthcoming of his connection with the Bedfordshire line.

At Luton Church in Bedfordshire there still exists an ancient brass, shewing in effigy a man between his two wives, and underneath eight boys and nine girls. The brass and the curious inscription round the stone on which it rests have attracted the attention of several old writers, whose descriptions of them may be read in the "Bibl. Top. Brit." The man is in armour, his head resting on a helmet, with crest: Out of a coronet a hand grasping a serpent. The brass has been remarkably well preserved, and a fine rubbing of it may be seen in the British Museum MSS. Room (Ref. 32,490, F F 15). It has the following inscription at foot:—

Pray for the soules of John Acworth squyer & Alys & Amy his wyfes whiche John decessed the xvij day of Marche the yer of o' Lord MDXIII on whose soules Jhu have m'cy.

The inscription round the edge of the stone has now become almost effaced, but from the oldest accounts it seems to have been:—

"O man whoe'er thow be, Timor Mortis shulde trowble the,
For when thou leest wenyst, veniet te mors superare,
And so thy grave grevys, ergo mortis memoraris,
J'hu mercy; Ladye help; mercy J'hu."

* See Harleian Society's Publications, vol. xix., p. 12.—EDITOR.

At the corners of the stone were emblems of the Evangelists. The brass shews four shields, three of which are—Quarterly: 1 and 4, On a chief indented three crowns; 2 and 3, Three roundles, each charged with a crown. The fourth shield is a griffin segreant.

The monument above described supplies nearly all the information we have to-day of this John Acworth. From the style of his armour (Haines, ccxvii.) it seems probable he was an esquire of the Royal Household, and the fact that the Thomas Acworth last mentioned held a similar position in 1502 is a coincidence which was perhaps the result of something more than accident. What manner of man John Acworth was may be partly guessed from the inscriptions on the monument, and it will be seen that of his eight sons one was George and another Thomas. But of other facts concerning him little more is known, and who his wives Alys and Amy were has not yet been discovered. On one subject, however—the shields displayed on the brass—something has to be said.

The three crowns quartered with roses are the Leche arms, and the crest, a hand grasping a serpent, is also Leche. What family the three roses indicate is uncertain. That the Leche crest should be shewn with the Leche arms so quartered is curious, and that the quartered coat should be displayed in three places makes it the more remarkable. But it is with the fourth shield we are now concerned. The device on this is a griffin segreant, and there is no doubt that, though not enrolled at Heralds' College, it represents the arms rightfully belonging to the Acworth family, which, perhaps through their neglect or indifference, perhaps from oversight by the College, were omitted to be registered when the latter came into existence, although the device was in use by the family then and previously, and therefore was their's irrespective of any grant from the College. In the British Museum MSS. Room may be seen a roll displaying ancient devices in coat armour, of which this griffin segreant is one, with the name Acworth beneath (Harl., 4205, f. 10/16). The date of the drawing would be, from the style of the armour, thirteenth or fourteenth century. Whether the links can now be proved connecting John Acworth of Luton with the ancestors who in past centuries had used the device is uncertain, but that he knew his descent from them there is no reason to doubt. From John Acworth of Luton, died 17 March 1513, the genealogical chart (pp. 57 to 67) takes its commencement.

George Acworth of Toddington,* who comes next on the pedigree, shews himself to be the son of John by his will and by the inquisition post-mortem held on him. In the former he states that his father is buried at Luton; the latter mentions that his father's name was John. George inherits, as proved by the inquisition post-mortem, the lands at Biscot, Lymbury, Luton, which William Acworth had bought in 1416 and 1418. His name appears several times on the Commission of the Peace and Gaol Delivery, and on 3 November 1529 he figures on the Rolls of Parliament as Member for the County. He died 17 May 1530, as shewn by inquisition post-mortem.

George married some time previous to 1519 Margaret, daughter of . . . . Wilberfosse of Egleston in the Bishopric of Durham, who, however, was evidently not his first wife. From the fact that he is described as of Toddington, which belonged to the Broughtons, it seems not unlikely that a previous wife was of that family, and the subsequent history of his daughter Joan lends colour to the supposition, as does also the fact that Lord Edmund Howard was one of the feoffees of his manor of Biscot and other lands. Two other of the feoffees, all of whom are given in his inquisition post-mortem, are Knights of Flodden Field celebrity, and the question is suggested whether Acworth himself took some minor part in that battle. George's will is in Archd. Beds, proved 31 May 1530, and from it and the inquisition post-mortem we learn what issue he left. The will mentions, too, a brother Thomas, probably the same whose name figures shortly after in a letter from the

* The seat to-day of Lady Mabel Sievier and her husband Mr. Robert Sievier, who bred there the celebrated racehorse "Sceptre."

Abbey of Roche, but of whom no further memorials have been found. His widow Margaret married again after his death, her new husband being John Danyell, who survived her. George Acworth's issue shewn by his will and inquisition post-mortem were:—

George, son and heir, born 1503, being 27 years old at time of his father's death.
Ann, wife of John Cornwall.
Frances, who on 15 January 1529-30 married Robert Charnock.*
Thomas, afterwards a Merchant Taylor.
Joan, daughter and heir of her mother Margaret.

Ann and her husband John Cornwall disappear from sight with the above mention of them, for no subsequent trace of either has been found.

Frances died some time before 1542, when the name of her husband, Robert Charnock, appears on the Feet of Fines for Bedfordshire with a second wife Alice. By both his wives Charnock had a numerous family. He died himself in 1547, as recorded on a tablet to his memory in Holcot Church, Bedfordshire. His eldest son Richard by his first wife lived till 1615, and is buried at Holcot. Richard's (first ?) wife was Mary Puttenham, daughter of Robert Puttenham, and granddaughter of Sir George Puttenham of Sherfield, Hants. His wife's sister Marjory married Sir John Throkmorton, and she mentions her "sister Charnock" in her will in 1591 (P.C.C., 92, Sainberbe). George and Richard Puttenham, one of whom was author of "The Arte of English Poesie" ("Dict. Nat. Biog."), were brothers of Mary Charnock. Of the other children of Robert Charnock, Florence, a daughter, probably also by his first wife, married Syriack Pettytt of Boughton-under-the-Blean, Kent, where she is buried, as mentioned in her husband's will, dated 1589 and proved 1592 (Cons. Cant.). The family of Charnock came to some distinction in the county, but like that of Acworth is now extinct in Bedfordshire in the male line.

Joan, the last of the daughters of George Acworth, and heir of her mother Margaret, demands fuller notice than either of her half-sisters, for she was implicated in the proceedings against Catherine Howard, the unhappy Queen of Henry VIII., was herself imprisoned in the Tower, and, tried on the charge of concealing from the King her knowledge of Catherine's antecedents, was convicted and sentenced to perpetual imprisonment and forfeiture of her estates. She was however, subsequently pardoned, and her sentence was remitted. The particulars of Catherine's trial and of the proceedings against Joan, at that time Joan Bulmer, and others are fully set forth in "Deputy-Keeper's Report," iii., Appendix ii., pp. 261—266, and Miss Strickland, in her "Queens of England," has made Joan the object of very strong opprobrium for the part she played in Catherine's doings before her marriage with Henry and after. How far this was deserved is an open question. The girl was thrown in early youth into a society in which she may have been much worse than her fellows, but the evidence thereof is insufficient. But one thing about her which is certain is that she could write, and it is more than doubtful whether Catherine could. Joan therefore acted as her "secretary" at a time when Catherine was corresponding with her lover Dereham. Though Joan was at this time young, Catherine was, if Miss Strickland's suppositions are well founded, still younger. Their probability has been much questioned by later writers (vide "Dict. Nat. Biog."), but be they correct or not, some particulars of one who was thus associated with Catherine in her early life may be of interest.

Joan does not appear to have been in any way related to the Howard family, but the position in which we find her in the Dowager Duchess of Norfolk's household is accounted for, if the supposition is correct, that her father's first wife had been a Broughton. Joan's mother Margaret, George Acworth's relict, came of a Yorkshire family, one that had perhaps been already connected with that of Acworth before the latter left the county. Her maiden name was Wilberfosse, and her father was probably William, son of William Wilberfosse. An inquisition post-mortem on the latter held at Durham shews that he died 30 April 1464, and that his son William was then 24 years of age. The inquisition post-mortem on the son is, however, missing, and therefore positive proof that he was Margaret's father is wanting. Margaret died some time previous to 15 December 1539, when an inquisition post-mortem was held at Durham, shewing that at the time of her death (omitted) she was seised, being at that time wife of John Danyell, of the manor of Egglyston and of messuages and lands in Egglyston and Nesbet, and that Joan Bulmer, wife of William Bulmer, was her daughter and heir. Besides these lands, which are in the Bishopric of Durham, Joan was heiress to large estates elsewhere. But Joan did not come into this property at once on her mother's death, for from a letter devised by the Privy Council 16 March 1542 it appears it was then being still held by her mother Margaret's second husband John Danyell, who is required by the letter "to produce all writings touching his late wife's lands now pertaining to Joan Bulmer." From this it may be concluded that John Danyell had no children by his wife Margaret, and he does not appear again. Joan is stated in the inquisition post-mortem on her mother to have been 20 at the time of the latter's death, and she must therefore have been born about 1519. Her husband William Bulmer was the third son of Sir John Bulmer. Sir John was, as landed proprietor, a neighbour of the Wilberfosse family, for he too held lands in Nesbet and Egglyston. He is remembered now chiefly for the part he took in the rising in the north, which went by the name of "The Pilgrimage of Grace," and for which in 1537 he was attainted and executed. Besides being neighbours it is likely the Bulmer and Wilberfosse families were connected before the marriage of William Bulmer to Joan Acworth, for it appears (see Common Rolls No. 70, Hil., 19 Henry VIII.) that Sir Ralph Bulmer, Knt., and Sir William Bulmer, Knt., jun., were two of the trustees for Margaret Acworth's estates. Other trustees were Sir Michael Fyssher, Ralph Bulmer, Esq., John Bentley, Esq., and Sir Henry Grey of Wrest, Bedfordshire, who was de jure Earl of Kent. The last name occurs again in the will of George Acworth, wherein Sir Henry is appointed supervisor.

Joan Acworth's marriage to William Bulmer was an unhappy one, and on hearing that Catherine Howard is about to become the wife of Henry VIII. she writes to her, begging her not to forget her former secretary, and hoping that she will order her husband to bring her to London. The letter is dated 12 July 1540, and a full copy of it is to be seen in the Calendars of State Papers (Domestic). No answer to this letter has been found, one supposed reason being that Catherine had not learnt the art of writing; but Joan's petition seems to have been granted, as shewn, unhappily, by the subsequent incidents brought to light in Catherine's trial. How far she was to blame for these readers of the proceedings must judge for themselves, but from the pardon she received after her conviction it may be fairly supposed she was not a willing or very culpable instrument in them. In later years when, her first husband having died, she married again, no word is heard to her disparagement. She lived long, and her children married well and happily. The death of William Bulmer is proved, though without date, by a case (Bdle. 16, No. 22) in the Court of Requests. Joan had before this, by order of the Privy Council dated 10 March 1542, obtained a separation from him, and a subsequent Act of the Privy Council directs that as he has disobeyed the previous order his wife's lands shall be taken from him. He appears, too, to have suffered some imprisonment in the Fleet for contumacy in the matter. Whether he died soon after his release in 1543 there is nothing to shew, but we hear no more of him except in the case above mentioned.

Joan's second marriage was with Edward, third son of George Waldegrave of Smalbridge, Esq. From indentures constituting a marriage settlement the date of it must have been in May or June 1556, and from transference therein of her estates it is also evident she had no children by her first husband. The name of her second husband recalls the terrible incident of Queen Catherine's trial, for Edward Waldegrave was another of the many parties implicated in it. The indictment against him contains nothing of special interest, and it is evident that like Joan he was pardoned for his offence, which was concealing his knowledge from the King. A tablet at Smalbridge shews that Edward Waldegrave died 13 August 1584, aged 70. He must therefore have been Joan's senior by five or six years, and born in 1513 or 1514. His wife survived him, and with their son Edward proved his will (P.C.C., 42, Watson). The tablet at Smalbridge records her death as well as his, but in her case the date is obliterated. The children of the marriage were a son and four daughters. Edward the son died in 1622, having married twice, but without male issue by either wife. Of the daughters, Ann married Humphrey Monose of Walthamstow; Mary married Isaac Astley of Melton, Norfolk; Barbara married Thomas Keighley of Greys; Margery married William Clopton of Groton, Norfolk. By the descendants of some of these, Waldegrave-Acworth blood is represented in families known at the present day.

It is intended in these notes to state only bald facts, but in other hands than the writer's the whole life story of Joan Acworth would afford material for a romance. A rich heiress on the side of her mother, thrown in early life into surroundings which involved her later in a trial, perhaps the most dramatic in the country's annals, married while young to the son of a man who had been executed for high treason, imprisoned in the Tower, tried and convicted, pardoned, separated from her husband, married at last to another, who had formerly been her companion in misfortune or perhaps in guilt—her career abounds in incidents from real life more startling than those of fiction. Here we must leave her for the next character on the pedigree.

By his will George Acworth of Toddington leaves "to my son Thomas my suit of gold and my gown furred with fowneys." Thomas was his younger son and must have been born between 1504 and 1518, and, almost with certainty, the date may be more nearly fixed as not later than 1510. Thomas Acworth became a Merchant Taylor. The entry of his admission is missing from the Company's records, but a recognizance, enrolled on the Close Rolls by William Bulmer to George Acworth of Luton and Thomas Acworth, Merchant Taylor, for £500, and dated 16 July 1541, shews that it was before that date. The George Acworth of Luton here mentioned was Thomas's elder brother, and to him the narrative will return after tracing the history of the younger branch.

Of Thomas many records still exist. Commencing with entries from the books of the Merchant Taylors' Company (which, unlike most of the City Companies, saved its ancient records in the fire of 1666), we find that he was Liveryman* in 1546-7, when he paid 6*s.* 8*d.* to an assessment made that year; Renter-Warden in 1551-2 (and doubtless elected to the Court at the end of his year of office); Master of the Company in 1558 or 1559, as he is afterwards twice mentioned as a Past-Master.† The house in which, as Merchant Taylor, he resided was known by the name of "The Signe of the Lute and Tunne in Watling Street in the Parish of St. Augustine, nere Paul's Gate, within the Citie of London." Here no doubt his children were born, and at some Church hard by it is likely they were baptized. That at least is the probable reason why the baptismal entries cannot be found, for the house must have been somewhere to the south of and near our present Cannon Street, and this district was ravaged by the fire of 1666, in which so many Churches were destroyed with their registers.

As a business man Thomas Acworth seems to have been fairly successful, and many of his transactions are enrolled on the Close Rolls. Here, too, his name may be seen as a party to the indentures whereby the property of his half-sister Joan Bulmer, widow, is transferred on her second marriage to Edward Waldegrave. From enrolments on the Hastings Rolls it appears that he and his wife Ann were at one time concerned with others in founding a Chantry. Whether he ever held office of any sort is uncertain, but he may well be the Master Hakworth mentioned 28 July 1559 in Henry Machyn's diary as Master of Brydwell, for correct spelling at this period counts for nothing.

Two inquisitions taken at the Guildhall, on which his name occurs, may be mentioned. The first is dated 8 May 1553, and Thomas Acworth is one of the jurors on it. Anthony Bouvyse has fled the country, and his property is seized by Lord Darcy of Chyche, Lord Chamberlain. If space permitted it might be of interest to copy here from the inventory of his goods some of the names of household articles in use in that day, but the curious may see them in the publications of the Index Society, where the inventory is printed in full. The second inquisition in which Thomas Acworth appears is dated 4 February 1559, and is held after the death of William Cooke, Esq. William Wylde, Merchant Taylor, the father-in-law of William Cooke, had, on 20 August 1549, vested certain property in William Pounsett and William Petre of London, gentlemen, and Thomas Acworth and Richard Robynson, Merchant Taylors, as trustees. William Cooke is Judge of the Admiraltie and Maister of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. William Wylde, his father-in-law, is, as appears by his will proved 1551 (P.C.C., 17, Bucke), actually a tailor—unlike most Merchant Taylors even of that day. Wilde's will shews Thomas Acworth as his creditor, but contains nothing more of interest. Of the trustees, William Petre is a historical character, who was afterwards Secretary of State (he was, too, the father-in-law of a John Gostwick, whose name will recur in these notes). The wills of Petre, Pounsett, and Cooke all suggest connection between themselves, and possibly with Acworth. The last mentions a Mr. John Pope of Lincoln, probably a relative of Acworth's son-in-law, Thomas Pope.* Though the baptismal evidence of the parentage of the children of Thomas Acworth is probably destroyed, proof exists on the Close Rolls that Thomasyn Acworth was his daughter, for the indentures enrolled thereon of 8 January 1551 and 16 January 1551 (Roll No. 465) can only be the marriage settlement between her and Thomas Pope, Merchant Taylor. Of this man little is known, but his will, proved 1591 (P.C.C., 74, Sainberbe), shews that his wife Thomasyn had died before him, for he leaves a relict Mary. Two of his legatees are John Coker and Paul Pope, both names that are constantly recurring in Acworth researches. But of the other children Thomas had besides Thomasyn, actual proof of parentage is missing, and it can only be said that beyond reasonable doubt he was the father of George Acworth, Prebendary of Southwell (vide "Dict. Nat. Biog."), and of his brother Richard of Lincoln's Inn, and almost certainly of Thomas, at one time Prebendary of Lichfield, and of Ann, who married William Scott of Camberwell. John and Chad, whose names have been found occurring once each only, were probably other sons. The former was on a commission of enquiry in Ireland 1576 (Ireland, Deputy Keeper's Reports). The latter is "cousin" and legatee in 1607 of Charles Acworth, who will be noticed in his place. The probability here rests on slight grounds, and it is possible indeed that Chad was not a son, but grandson of Thomas. But—and this may be asserted with considerable confidence—Thomas Acworth, Merchant Taylor, and his elder brother George of Luton were, with two or three exceptions known and accounted for, the only two men living in 1560 of their name and generation, and all Acworths found thereafter are children or descendants of one or the other.† Thomas died in 1569 intestate, and administration of his estate was granted to his relict Ann 2 November 1569 (P.C.C.). From the records of the Merchant Taylors' Company it seems that she was in the same year admitted to the freedom of the Company. Ann's parentage has not been found. She had a life interest in property at Woodstock, the reversion of which was sold in 1564 to Christopher Edwards, haberdasher (Close Roll, 665), but no clue to it is afforded thereby.

George Acworth, D.C.L., Prebendary of Southwell, etc., of whom some notice appears in the "Dict. of Nat. Biog.," is supposed to be a son of Thomas Acworth, Merchant Taylor, for the reasons, amongst others, that on his preferment to the prebend in 1559, and on his institution in 1560 to the living of Aston Flamvill, his sureties are Thomas Acworth and Thomas Pope, Merchant Taylors (First Fruits Composition Books), and that, in a letter to Queen Elizabeth on her accession, he describes himself as of London. Dr. Acworth has left it on record that his mother had wished him to study for the law. This affords some ground for supposing that Ann (assuming her to have been his mother) came herself of a legal family. Be that as it may, he would have done better to carry out her wishes, for he was ever more a lawyer than a churchman. It is no part of a genealogist's duty to misstate facts, and it has to be confessed that the records he has left shew him to have been a man of higher ability than character.

George Acworth was born probably about 1533. Reference to authorities shews that he matriculated at Peterhouse, Cambridge, 12 November 1548; was B.A. in 1552-3; Fellow 26 January 1553-4; M.A. 1555, subscribing the Roman Catholic articles imposed that year on all graduates. During the reign of Mary he resided abroad, and returned to England on the accession of Elizabeth. He was Public Orator of Cambridge in 1559; Prebendary of Southwell 1559—66; admitted Advocate Court of Arches 1 November 1562; LL.D. of Cambridge 1563; incorporated Oxford 22 March 1566-7. For some time—about the years 1565 and 1566 and onwards—he was Chancellor and Vicar-General to Robert Horne, Bishop of Winchester, one of whose daughters he married. About 1570 he became a member of the household of Archbishop Parker, by whom he was employed on a visitation of the Church and Diocese of Canterbury in 1573. In 1576, in consequence of his dissolute habits, he lost all his preferments, but was afterwards, 18 March 1576-7, constituted Master of the Faculties and Judge of the Prerogative Court in Ireland, together with Robert Garvey. The commission to them was revoked 14 March 1578-9, but Acworth is still found in Ireland on 26 April 1581, when the Archbishop of Armagh writes of him, "that Ford is not to supplant Dr. Acworth, who is his Vicar-General and an Englishman learned in the laws" (State Papers, Irish). During the time he held office in Ireland as Commissioner many fiants appear on the Deputy-Keeper's Reports, Ireland, shewing appeals to him or from his decisions. On 2 December 1578 he is described as late Vicar-General of Dublin, shewing that he must for a short time have held that office. In 1581 he is a Commissioner for Ecclesiastical Causes. On 28 July 1592 a letter of the Privy Council (Dasent's Acts of the Privy Council) to the Archbishop of Dublin requires the Archbishop to reinstate one John Birde in the "Registrarshippe of your Lordship's owne Consystoriall and Provynciall Courte of Dublin," of which he had been dispossessed by one Dr. Acworthe, "now deceased." The letter shews that before being appointed Registrar he had (as already known) been Vicar-General to the Archbishop, and it would seem to indicate that he died in or shortly before 1592. But there is evidence from the second marriage of his widow that he died some years earlier, and all mention of his name in the various reports in which he figures as holding a succession of different offices in Ireland up till 1581 ceases suddenly from that year. But the letter quoted is the only direct information found as to his death, and he does not appear to have left a will. No mention is ever made of him by the numerous relatives he had on his wife's side; nor, with one exception, is any made of his children. Forty years later an allusion is made to him by a subsequent holder of his office of the Faculty, Dr. T. Rogers; but beyond shewing that, like Dr. Acworth, Rogers found himself in disagreement with the Bishops, his letter (20 December 1617, State Papers, Irish) is of no interest.

Dr. Acworth was the writer of a reply, "De visibili Rom' anarchia" (printed in London 1573), to Nic. Sanders' great work, "De visibili monarchia Ecclesiæ" (issued in the summer of 1571). His oration in honour of Bucer and Fagius was printed in 1562 in Bucer's "Scripta Anglicana." He assisted Archbishop Parker in the compilation of his great work, "De Antiquitate Brit. Ecc.," and the first twenty-four pages of Augustine's life therein are from his pen, as is shewn by a copy existing in Lambeth Library. He was also writer of the Preface to the second book of Bucer's works.

Acworth owed many of his appointments to Parker, and the favour always shewn to him by the Archbishop is attested by a letter still to be seen at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, in which he acknowledges that all he is is due to him. Dr. Acworth had indeed every prospect of rising to higher position in the Church, and probably would have done so but for his own folly. At Parker's funeral in 1575 he was one of the mourners. Acworth's admission to Southwell, North Muskham Prebend, was on 6 December 1559 (Fasti Ecc. Ang.), on the deprivation of George Palmer. His incumbencies were Freckingham Rectory, Suffolk, 7 February 1561; Aston Flamvill, Leicestershire, Rectory, 29 June 1560; Wraugton (or Elingdon), Wilts, Rectory, 8 October 1576. It is remarkable that the living of Aston Flamvill was in the gift of the same Sir Henry Grey who was named as supervisor in the will of his grandfather George Acworth of Toddington, and Anthony Grey, afterwards Earl of Kent, was his successor in it.

Some further particulars of Dr. Acworth, gleaned from various classes of records, may be of interest, though they relate more to his private than his public life. His marriage has been already allnded to. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Horne, Bishop of Winchester. Where he was married is not known, but at St. Swithin's, Winchester, are entries of the baptism of a son Richard on 9 September 1565, and of a daughter Fraunce on 25 March 1567. Of the latter nothing more has been discovered, but Richard was one of the "nephews" (grandsons) who were legatees of Bishop Horne in 1579 (will in P.C.C., 26, Bakon), and the same year was a scholar at Corpus, Oxford, where he became B.A. 23 October 1585, M.A. 21 February 1588-9, and Fellow 1588-9. No further record of him has yet been found.

of forty pounds a year for his widow.

Sacred
to the memory of
The Revd Hugh Fraser, M.A.
32 years the esteemed Rector of this Parish who died on the 14th day of April 1837 aged 73 years. [Buried 21 April.]
He was a man endowed with the simplicity of the patriarch and the virtues of a Christian.
He erected the mansion near this church as a refuge in his old age and as a residence for future Rectors of Woolwich and which he lived to enjoy 24 years.
His active mind however could not rest here.
He discovered that a legacy had been
the poor of this parish.
He recovered this legacy and the poor have for sixteen years received a distribution of three hundred loaves per week for nine weeks during the severity of winter.

He survived all his children, one daughter and four sons, the eldest & last of whom died at Cheltenham at the age of 19. This he often declared was the greatest trouble he ever knew.
He is gone, alas,
but has left an example that all must desire to follow tho' few can hope to equal.

EX AUTOG. PENES DOM. RICI ARKWRIGHT DE CROMFORD, MILES.*

To all and singular to whom these presents shall come Sir Isaac Heard Knt. Garter Principal King at Arms and George Harrison Esq. Norroy King at Arms of the North parts of England from the river Trent Northward send greeting. Whereas Sir Richard Arkwright of Willersley in the County of Derby K^t hath represented unto the most noble Charles Duke of Norfolk Earl Marshal and hereditary Marshal of England that being uncertain of any Armorials Ensigns pertaining to his family and unwilling to use any without unquestionable authority he requested his Grace's warrant for our devising granting and exemplifying to him and his descendants such arms and crest as he and they may lawfully bear and use. And forasmuch as the said Duke of Norfolk did by warrant under his hand and seal bearing date the 15 day of January instant authorize and direct us to devise grant and exemplify such arms and Crest accordingly Know ye therefore that we the said Garter and Norroy in pursuance of the consent of the said Earl Marshal and by virtue of the Letters Patent of our several offices to each of us respectively granted under the great seal of Great Britain have devised and do by these presents grant and exemplify to the said Sir Richard Arkwright the Arms following that is to say Argent on a mount vert a cotton tree fructed proper and on a chief azure between two bezants an inescocheon of the field charged with a Bee volant proper. And for the Crest on a wreath of the colours an eagle rising or in the beak pendant by a ribband gules an escocheon azure thereon a hank of cotton argent as the same are in the margin hereof more plainly depicted to be borne and used for ever hereafter by him the said Sir Richard Arkwright Kt. and his Descendants with due and proper differences according to the laws of Arms without the let or interruption of any person or persons whatsoever. In witness whereof we the said Garter and Norroy Kings of Arms have to these presents subscribed our Names and affixed the Seals of our several offices this 29th day of January in the 27 year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George the 3^d by the grace of God King of Great Britain France and Ireland Defender of the Faith, etc., and in the year of our Lord 1787.

ISAAC HEARD
Garter Principal King of Arms.

GEORGE HARRISON
Norroy King of Arms.

Sir Richard Arkwright lived at the Rock House in Cromford at the time of his obtaining this Grant of Arms, his house at Willersley not being then finished.

The above Grant is neatly written on a small skin of vellum stamped with a six shilling stamp. In a broad margin towards the top of the Grant, the arms are painted in a very elegant manner, and underneath the arms is the following motto: Multa tuli fecique (I have borne and done much). The top of the Grant is ornamented with the Earl Marshal's, the Royal, and a third coat of arms. Sir Richard Arkwright stated that this grant cost him £45.

Reviews.

The Journal of the Ex Libris Society. Vol. XIV., Parts 7 and 8. London: A. and C. Black, Soho Square.

THESE two numbers consist principally of the Report of the year's Transactions of the Society, and particulars of the Annual Exhibition. We notice that the "General Index" of Vols. I. to XII. has now been issued to Subscribers, and the completion of this important and arduous undertaking will be of great value to all those interested in Ex Libris, bringing, as it does, the immense amount of material contained in the twelve volumes into easy reference.

In Part 8 a list of Festoon Plates is commenced, several illustrations of which are given. We also notice a communication of the subject of the extensive forgery of old Armorial Plates, which has been going on for some time in America, and a list is given of some that are being circulated.

Fenland Notes and Queries. Vol. V., Part 62. July 1904. Peterborough: George C. Caster, Market Place.

THIS Part contains many interesting items, among which we notice some Wills of the Vernatti Family, and some notes respecting the demolition of monuments in Peterborough Minster, the article being illustrated by nine Coats of Arms formerly in the Cloisters.

Grant of Arms to Peter Davis.*

The following Grant of Arms was copied from the original, in the possession of the late Major Sherston of Evercreech, Somersetshire. The arms are those of Dodington of Horsington, originally of Dodington, both in Somerset, with the small difference of a cinquefoil in the arms and crest, which is really only a sufficient difference for a younger branch of the male line of Dodington. The anomaly is the more apparent because the grantee was not in any way the representative of the Dodington family, and also that these same arms and crest were later granted to Peter Sherston, a son of a sister of Peter Davis of this grant. This second grant is printed in "Wells Cathedral: its Monuments and Heraldry," by A. J. Jewers, in which there is also a pedigree of Sherston, shewing their connection with Davis and Dodington, the grant here printed having come to hand too late to be included in that work, while the peculiarity of these two grants claims for it a place in these pages. The grant is adorned with paintings of the arms granted, and the arms of the Duke of Norfolk and the Earl of Effingham.

To all and Singular to whom these presents shall come, John Anstis Esq[r] Garter Principal King of Arms and Stephen Martin Leake Esq[r] Clarenceux King of Arms send Greeting. Whereas Peter Davis Esq[r] Recorder of Wells and Bencher of the Hon[able] Society of Lincoln's Inn hath made application to the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Effingham Deputy with the Royal approbation to the Marshal of England for his Lordships Warrent for our Devising Granting and assigning unto him such arms and crest as he and his descendants may lawfully bear. And forasmuch as his Lordship considering the premisses, and also the qualifications of the said Peter Davis did by Warrent under his hand and seal bearing date the seventeenth day of this instant June Order and Direct us to devise grant and Assign unto him the said Peter Davis such arms and crest accordingly. Now know ye that we the said Garter and Clarenceux in pursuance of the consent of the said Earl of Effingham and by Virtue of the Letters Patent of Our Offices to each of us respectively granted under the Great Seal of Great Britain have devised and by these presents Grant and Assign unto the said Peter Davis the arms and crest hereafter mentioned viz[t] Sa. a Cinquefoil Or, between three Bugle Horns Argent, stringed of the second. And for his crest On a wreath of the colours a stag couchant regardant or Armed and Hoofed Gules charged on the shoulder with a Cinquefoil Vert. As the same in the margin hereof are more plainly depicted, to be born and used for ever hereafter by him the said Peter Davis and the Heirs and other Descendants of his Body with their due differences according to the Law and Usage of Arms, without the Lett or interruption of any person or persons whatsoever. In Witness whereof We the said

The following entries from the above book (now in the possession of the Rev. John Henry Green, M.A., Oxon, Rector of Mowsley in Leicestershire, who is probably the heir male and the heir general of the ancient family of Dinham of Spalding and Stamford) throw considerable light on the Dinham Pedigree, as nearly all the sponsors were relations.

The Rev. John Dinham, whose children are entered in this Bible, was for twenty-three years Perpetual Curate of Spalding and Incumbent of Whaplode Drove. He was in the Commission of the Peace, and a member of "The Gentleman's Society" at Spalding, founded by Maurice Johnson the Antiquary. He married, on the 17th October 1751, Gresham, daughter and coheir of John Jackson of Pinchbeck and Spalding, by Gresham, daughter and coheir of William Ambler of Kirton and Spalding, by Mary his wife, daughter of Sir Anthony Oldfield of Spalding, Baronet, whose wife Elizabeth was a daughter of Sir Edward Gresham of Titsey, Knight, and a sister of Sir Marmaduke Gresham, who was created a Baronet 31 July 1660.

On the 17th day of October, Ann. Dom. 1751, were married in Spalding Church The Reverend John Dinham and Miss Gresham Jackson.

They had Issue as follows, viz.

Monumental Inscriptions at St. Anne's, Soho.*

A marble monument high up on the south side. Arms quite gone:—Here under lyeth interr'd | the Body of Tho. Aozr, | Esq^re, Surveyor General | to King Charles the 2^nd & | to King James the 2^nd | of all their Woods on | the South side Trent | & Carver in Ordinary | to Katherine Queen | Dowager of England | Who died the 27^th of | August An^o Dn^i 1687 | Aged 45 years.

The name on the monument is undoubtedly Aozr, but his will, of which an abstract is appended, shews the name to be Agar,† as we know it to be from other sources also. The copy of this inscription which appears in "The New View of London," printed in 1708, gives the name as Agar, and is incorrect in some minor points, but it states the arms to be: Argent, a chevron engrailed gules between three boars' heads couped sable. These arms, which are now quite obliterated, are those of the Derbyshire family of Agard.

Thomas Agar of the Middle Temple, London, Esq., now living in Gerard Street in S. Anne, Westminster. Will dated 4 Feb. 1686. To be buried in the church of the parish where he dies. Wife M^rs Mary Agar all real estate in Barnes in Surrey in possession or in reversion, should testator's mother-in-law survive, to be sold to pay a mortgage on some lands in Barnes of £420 held by Mr Thompson, being an old debt of testator's father. A neat white marble monument with a bishop's crosier and mitre in relief below :— Sacred | To the Memory of JANE COTTRELL, Spinster, | Daughter of Sr CHARLES LODOWICK COTTRELL, K.G. | the best of Friends & worthyest of Women. | They ever lov'd her most | who knew her best. | That she was happy too in love of God, | shall be best known at the last day | when Humility and Charity | Penitence & Prayer | Shall be acceptable in Christ Jesus. | She died Sepr ye 3d, 1762 | And lies in the Vault of this Church | near the remains of her belov'd Brother: | Dr WILLIAM COTTRELL, | The late Bp of Leighlin and Ferns in Ireland. | He was promoted to that See | from the Deanery of Rapho, | where he resided many years | and built an Elegant house for his Successors. | His benevolent disposition | Learning, Piety, Charity and Hospitality | made him universally lamented | when taken from this world | Anno Domini 1747, | and here lies buried.

† This is no doubt the family from which Agar Town was named, and which property was entirely absorbed by the Midland Railway some years ago.

Sir Charles Ludowicke Cottrell, Knt., who succeeded his father Sir Charles Cottrell as Master of the Ceremonies in 1686, married first Miss Burrell and had a son, Sir Clement, who took the name of Dormer and left issue. Sir Charles married secondly in 1691 Elizabeth, only daughter of Chaloner Chute, Esq., of the Vine in Hampshire, by the Hon. Catherine Lennard, daughter of Richard, Lord Dacre, by which lady he was father of (1) John, a Colonel of Marines, (2) Stephen, LL.D., who left issue, (3) William, D.D., Dean of Raphoe in 1731 and after Bishop of Leighlin and Ferns, who died unmarried in 1744. Also a daughter, Jane, the subject of the above monument.

As this monument states that William Cottrell, D.D., died in 1747, and Burke's "Commoners" states the date of his death as 1744, it will be as well to say here that he died intestate, administration to his state being granted in July 1744. (P.C.C.)

The arms, which have been quite obliterated from the carved shield, are: Argent, a bend between three escallop shells sable.

A white marble monument with an urn on a pedestal, and a female figure holding an open book inscribed :—"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this: to visit the Fatherless and Widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the World. St James, Chap. I., ver. 27." Also these arms below: A fesse between three estoiles.

Crest: A helmet full-faced.

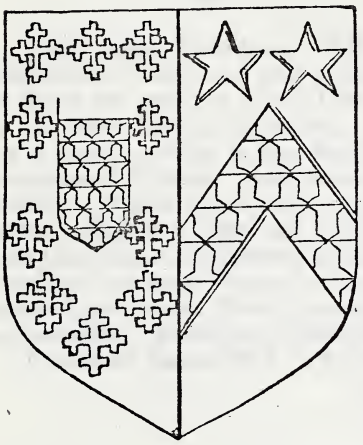
Reverendi ad modum in Christo Patris | Samuelis Squire, S.T.P. | Episcopi Menevensis | Vicarii de Greenwich in Comitatu Cantiano | et | Hugusce Ecclesiæ | Per sex decun plus quam annos | Rectoris | Obiit 7 Maii 1766 | Anno Ætatis 54.

Samuel Squire was a son of Thomas Squire, a druggist and apothecary of Warminster in Wilts, who had married in 1708 Susan, daughter of John Scott,

Rector of Bishopstrow, an adjacent parish, and was born in Warminster in 1713 (his father died 30 November 1761, aged 74, and his mother died on 9 August 1758, aged 72). Samuel was admitted as a pensioner at St. John's College, Cambridge, 23 June 1730, and became Somerset Scholar on 11 July following; the Master of St. John's, Dr. John Newcombe, was his uncle, having married a sister of his father. He rose rapidly. In March 1749-50 he received the Rectory of S. Anne's, Soho, and on 22 June 1751 the Vicarage of Greenwich, both of which he retained until his death. He was also Dean of Bristol, and Bishop of S. David's in 1761. He married on 13 May 1752 Charlotte, eldest daughter of Thomas Ardesoif of Soho Square; she died 12 April 1771, aged 50, leaving three children. The Bishop died in Harley Street, London, 7 May 1766. For some particulars of his life, see the "Dictionary of National Biography."

The arms on the monument are quite obliterated.



A carved marble tablet of the period, with these arms:—(Gules), an inescutcheon vaire within an orle of cross crosslets (or); Impaling, ... a chevron vaire and in chief two mullets .... pierced .... This coat is not given by Papworth.

Here lyeth the body | of Mrs GRACE MOULDSWORTH | wife to | HENDER MOULDSWORTH, Sqr | late Governor of | Jamaica | who dyed the 31st of | August 1687.

Sir Hender Molesworth (2nd son of Hender Molesworth, Esq., by Mary, eldest daughter of John Sparke of the Fryery in Plymouth, Esq.) was a merchant and settled in Jamaica, and became President of the Council there, and for some time Governor of the Island until King James II. appointed Christopher, Duke of Albemarle, Governor 15 September 1687, on whose death in 1689 the King appointed him to succeed. Hender Molesworth having supported the revolution in favour of William, Prince of Orange, was by him, after he became King, created a Baronet on 19 July 1689, with remainder, failing male issue, to his elder brother John Molesworth (who accordingly succeeded and is ancestor of the present baronet). Hender Molesworth married first Grace, daughter of Mr. .... Maugey, goldsmith, of London, and widow of Thomas Tottle, a merchant in Jamaica, the lady commemorated by the above monument. He married secondly Mary, daughter of Thomas Temple of Frankton in Warwickshire, Esq., and relict of Sir Thomas Lynch of Jamaica, whom Sir Hender succeeded as Governor there, but had no issue by either marriage, and consequently was succeeded by his brother John according to the limitation in the patent. The impaled coat is not given by Burke or Papworth for Maugey.

A plain tablet with the arms in a lozenge: (Vert), a lion rampant (or), FARRELL or O'FARRELL of Connaught:—

Near this place | lieth the body of | Mrs DIANA FARRELL | Daughter of CHARLES FARRELL, Esq., who died the | 17th of Septembr in the year | of our Lord 1686 and in | the 22nd year of her age, yeil- | ded up her Soul into the | mercifull hand of God | who gave it.

Though he slay me, yet | will I trust in him. | Job 13th & 15th.

A very large monument of white marble, adorned with urns, fruit, cupids, and curtain with a gilt fringe, and beneath a canopy a figure of the lady standing. Below in a lozenge: Argent, a lion rampant sable between eight cinquefoils in orle gules.

In this Chancel Lyes Interr'd the body | of the Right Hon^ble^ the Lady GRACE PIERREPONT | Daughter to the Most Noble and Puissant Prince | HENRY PIERREPONT, Marquess of Dorchester | Deceased, who in her Lifetime was Exemplary for | Piety, Virtue & Charity. She departed this Life on | the 25^th^ day of March in the year of our Lord | 1703 in the 68 year of her Age.

Lady Grace Pierrepont. Will dated 11 May 1699. £500 for funeral and tombstone. £40 to the poor of the parish in which she dies. Great pearl necklace of thirty-five pearls to cousin Lord Newark, to remain in the family as an heirloom to his heirs, Earls of Kingston. Cousin the Hon. Gervis Pierrepont, Esq., £100 for a ring. Jewells to the Marchionesse of Halifax, Countess of Clare, and the Countess of Thanet. Lady Grace Pelham, dau. of the Countess of Clare, certain Jewells. Cousin Cheney, the Earl of Kingston's sister, a gold cup with cover and salver. Nephews John and Charles Mannours, sons of late sister, each £3000, with the lease of the Rectory of Doncaster, also the manors, lands, etc., that came from the late Lord Baning. Cousin Anne Pierrepont of Nottingham, widow, and cousin Egerton each £100. Anne Pierrepont, spinster, £100. Bequests to friends and servants. Residuary legatee and executrix servant Elizabeth Childers.

SOME NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY.

Dr. Acworth's name figures several times in Chancery Proceedings and in transactions enrolled on the Close Rolls. His parsonage of Aston Flamvill was the cause of a suit (Ser. II. Eliz. 3/54) against Thomas Raynes and William Fyggyn, Thomas Raynes claiming to be in possession of the living. Another suit in which his name appears will be noticed under the head of his brother Richard. An indenture enrolled 13 October 1568 (Close Roll, 779) shews Acworth as buyer of the manor of Mounthide, Southants, from Thomas Beltnappe alias Stowers, but whether he remained owner of this property is doubtful.

Richard is stated to be the brother of Dr. Acworth in the Chancery Suits lately alluded to. John Gostwick had sold, 21 May 1562, to Richard Acworth, described as of Furnival's Inn, the reversion of certain property in Bedfordshire, and a recognizance in which with his brother he is bound, 13 February 1562, to William Hawtrie of Checquers, Buckinghamshire, for money due, "by reason of his late office of undersheriffwicke in Co. Beds," may relate to the transaction (Close Roll, 627). The reversion fell in very soon after, in 1567, and Richard then sold the property, partly to his brother George and partly to Sir Robert Gatlyn, Lord Chief Justice. Gostwick then brought an action to upset the sale of the reversion, and declared that he did not know he was selling his property. The action failed, as also did another brought by Francis Russell, son of the Earl of Bedford, in 1568, claiming that Gostwick had previously sold the reversion of the property to him, and another brought in 1588 by William, the son of John Gostwick. It is needless to trace here further developments, but it may be mentioned that Gostwick had, simultaneously with his sale to Acworth, also disposed of other property to another buyer, and this appears to have been also a subject of litigation. Sir William Petre, who it will be remembered was father-in-law of John Gostwick, somehow became possessed of this other property, but by his will leaves it to his own son. It is difficult to credit that Gostwick did not know what he was selling to Acworth, for his name appears more than once on the Feet of Fines for Bedfordshire in entries that look like transactions in land. Richard was admitted a member of Lincoln's Inn 28 April 1562, and thereafter he is generally described as of Lincoln's Inn, but there is hardly any doubt that he is also the Richard Acworth described in recognizances in 1572 and 1574 as of Worsleye, Hunts, gent. On these occasions he is associated with his cousin Richard Charnock of Holcot and his brother-in-law Thomas Pope, Merchant Taylor (Close Rolls, 892 and 947). It is almost impossible to escape the further conclusion that in his latter years he filled a dual position, for on 11 January 1582-3 Richard Acworth is admitted Merchant Taylor by patrimony as son of Thomas Acworth, Merchant Taylor, and only one Thomas Acworth, Merchant Taylor, is on the Company's records. The witnesses who usually testify to a candidate's parentage are missing too from the entry of his admission, seemingly because his is already on record at his Inn. It will be remembered that after the death of the father Thomas his widow Ann was admitted Merchant Taylor in 1569. Perhaps Richard was admitted in 1583, as she had been in 1569, to permit of dealing with a business that had been left, when the latter admission would probably mean that Ann died in 1583.

As Merchant Taylor Richard appears on 4 December 1589, when he is surety for William Fones, instituted to Cranfield, Bedfordshire (First Fruits Composition Book). That is the latest record found of him, and he apparently left no will. He had entered three boys at the Merchant Taylors' School on 18 June 1587. Of these, Thomas was buried 8 March 1600-1 at St. Dionis Backchurch. Richard, born 1572, matriculated at St. John's, Oxford, 17 October 1589, aged 17; was a schoolmaster at Milton in March 1597 and at Whitstable April 1597; married Julyan Martin at St. Dunstan's, Canterbury, 31 December 1596. John appears to have been Curate of Chislet July 1604 and of Warthorne in September 1615 (information kindly supplied by J. M. Cowper, Esq., of Canterbury). A Charles Acworth, schoolmaster at Maidstone November 1665, was probably a descendant of one of these brothers, as a William Acworth, died 1643, administration to relict Mary (Archd. London), may also have been. Another son of Richard, probably younger than his three brothers, was Edward, who became like his father a Merchant Taylor, and had a son Edward and a grandson Charles; all these were admitted members of the Company by patrimony. On the Visitation of Kent Richard Acworth, therein described as Dr. jure, is shewn to have had a daughter Ann, who married Nicolas Dearing. He appears to have been her second husband, for the Charing Parish Register has Nicolas Dearing married to Ann Darrell on 17 August 1597. There were several children of the marriage.

Richard Acworth demands but one more reference. On 1 December 1570 he is a party with John Puckering, afterwards Lord Keeper, to an indenture, in which Edward Scott of Camberwell is the party of the other part. The indenture constitutes the marriage settlement of Ann Acworth on her marriage with William Scott of Camberwell. It is assumed that herein Richard was acting for his sister, and Ann's place on the Acworth pedigree is therefore shewn as that of another daughter of Thomas. The accompanying Scott genealogy, made up from various contemporary evidences, gives the issue of her marriage.

Thomas Acworth, Prebendary of Lichfield 10 January 1560-1, Ruiton Stall (Fasti Ecc. Ang.), is supposed to be the same man who was successively Incumbent of Wandsworth, Wrestlingworth, and Potton, and to be another son of Thomas Acworth, Merchant Taylor. His sureties for Wrestlingworth are Thomas Acworth, Merchant Taylor, and the same William Emery who had acted as Proctor for Dr. Acworth. He was made Deacon 26 January 1560 (Strype's "Life of Archbishop Grindal"). His institutions were: Wandsworth, 28 January 1560-61; Wrestlingworth, Bedfordshire, 8 May 1561; Potton, Bedfordshire, 10 June 1562. The Potton incumbency he resigned 31 October 1573, as appears from an action brought by his successor John Clarke to recover tithes (Exch. Bills, Eliz., Beds, No. 42). The action, which was of the year 1576, shews that Thomas was then living. But he must have died in 1577, or perhaps at the end of 1576, for the incumbency of Wrestlingworth is again vacant in 1577 "by death." Acworth's successor there was David Price. The patron of Potton, and who presented both Acworth and Clarke to the living, was Rowland Litton, Esq., and the name Litton (Lytton) will recur in connection with the elder branch of the Acworth family, to which we now return. Thomas, the incumbent of Wrestlingworth, left no family, so far as can be ascertained, and with him every known male descendant of the younger branch has now been noticed.

George, son and heir of George Acworth of Toddington, has left fewer records than his younger brother Thomas, the Merchant Taylor. The two were connected in some few transactions enrolled on the Close Rolls, but George led mostly the life of a small country gentleman. In 1550 he is one of the Commissioners appointed for collecting the subsidy of 4 Edward VI. in the Third Division of the County of Bedfordshire, and it may be mentioned that the Subsidy Roll contains no other occurrence than his own of the name Acworth. Jointly with Edward Butler he was a large buyer of church lands, and his name occurs, too, sometimes as buyer or seller of other property in his county. Some of the sales he thus made were to the Crawley* family and others, to whom also he disposed of part of his own ancestral estates. The Crawley sales are shewn on the Feet of Fines for Bedfordshire, and the property so sold has remained in possession of this family ever since. In 1549 George is one of the legatees of Walter Worlich of Everton, Huntingdonshire, by whom he is left certain property in Potton. Thereafter he is always described as George Acworth of Potton, but till then had been known as of Luton, and it was to the house of her brother at Luton that William Bulmer was ordered to send his wife in 1542. To whom George himself was married is not known. Of records indicating possible near relationship to neighbouring families there are several, but all which can be said with certainty is that his relict's name was Agnes (Ann), and that after Acworth's death she married again to Symon Phillips, then of Abington, Cambridgeshire, gent., and who died in 1578, his wife having probably died before him. As widow of Acworth Ann's name appears twice in Chancery Proceedings, and from the first of these it is of interest to notice that her husband had been in some sort of relationship with Thomas, the second Lord Vaux, the poet. In the other Ann describes herself as being a poor woman, and "havyng but little to lyve on." Ann's name as wife of Acworth figures on one of the Crawley sales as far back as 1544, but possibly the marriage was in 1535, when Acworth appears to have made a re-settlement of his property. In early life George was implicated in a curious Star Chamber case (Henry VIII., 26/401). Sir John Mordaunt complains that he and John Fisher and others have forcibly abducted his ward Robert Tyringham, whom he had lately bought of Sir George Throckmorton, and have married him to Rose Fisher. The name of John Fisher occurs elsewhere with those of Acworth and Walter Worlich as trustees for Robert Mowsedale and Elizabeth his wife, and probably some relationship existed to account for their connection in this manner.

* By kind permission of Francis Crawley, Esq., J.P., of Stockwood, Luton, Bedfordshire, access has been had to the family papers of the period.

George Acworth died in 1561, and having been born in 1503 was 58 years old at the time of his death. He had a son and heir, Henry, and another, whose parentage is proved, William; and probably Richard, Thomas, Charles, Steven, and George were others, though proof of it is wanting. Steven writes Burghley, 11 April 1578, offering to raise troops in Ireland (State Papers, Irish). He had probably followed his eldest brother Henry to that country, where, as will appear, he had been appointed Customer of Waterford. Richard, a tanner, and Thomas, a mining prospector, are found under circumstances that distinguish them from their cousins of the same names, and they can only be sons of George Acworth of Luton. Thomas writes to Sir Robert Cecil in February 1596 (State Papers, Domestic) he has obtained a licence to dig for minerals in Norfolk and Suffolk, in which, strange to say, one John Bird—the name has occurred before in connection with Dr. Acworth—is a joint licensee with him. Thomas is in 1593 the lessee of Hernehill Rectory, where his brother was Vicar. In the lease he is described as Thomas Acworth, senior, and he is no doubt father of the Thomas Acworth of St. Martin's-le-Grand, whose administration is granted to Elizabeth, relict, in 1615 (Westminster Wills).

Charles Acworth is a clothier. He is associated in a lawsuit with his (assumed) brother William, who is known to be a son of George Acworth of Luton; and here it may be said that, wherever the name Acworth is found, circumstances point to a relationship. Charles, by his will proved 1608 (P.C.C., 55, Hudleston), leaves a widow, Mary, and two stepdaughters, Margaret and Mary Alewarde, also a daughter of his own, Elizabeth; he has cousins Chad Acworth, Robert Rockolde, Robert Wheatley.

William Acworth, M.A., is proved the son of George of Potton by a memorial brass at Ewelme, which shews, too, that the date of his death was 21 May 1606, and that he left a widow Mary. By a previous wife Elizabeth, daughter of Simon and Barbara Purifay, he had two daughters, Judith and Cicely, the latter of whom married Thomas Clark on 24 February 1595 at Hernehill, Kent. William was at this time Incumbent of Hernehill and of the adjoining parish of Graveney. His will, proved 1607, is in P.C.C. (27, Stafford).

To be buried in the family vault at Dunleer beside her husband Thomas Tenison, and she bequeaths £50 to close the vault and place thereon a monumental slab, stating that "Dorothy Tenison, whose maiden name was Upton, for 47 years the wife of Thomas Tenison, leaving no descendants, closed, with her remains, the family place of interment." To Elizabeth Bellingham, wife of Henry Bellingham of Castle Bellingham, plate, etc., and to their son Alan Bellingham watch, snuff-box, etc. To Mary Norton, "who married my son Thomas," an annuity of ten pounds. To Clotworthy Rowley[18] and Edward Hill of Cavendish Row, Dublin, and the survivors of them and their heirs, her dwelling-house and offices in Rutland Square, Dublin. Residue to aforesaid Elizabeth Bellingham. Witnesses: Ann Walsh, George Bursleigh,[19] Patrick Long.

Proved 1795.

Robert[20] Tenison of Trim, co. Meath. Will dated 29 March 1722. To John Fox and Humphrey Barry, trustees of testator's lands, estate and house, etc. Debt due to Theophilus Eaton. Wife Anne Tenison. Ex'ors: John Fox and Humphrey Barry (John Fox had a son named John). Witnesses: John Clarke, John White, Martin Nolan (?).

Not proved.

[1] James Moorecroft, D.D., Archdeacon of Meath, died 1723. His wife was Elizabeth Tenison a sister or niece of the Bishop's. She died 1730.

[2] Probably the Rev. Claudius Gilbert, afterwards Divinity Professor at T.C.D.

[3] Ancestor of Foster Baronets of Glyde Court. He died 16 May 1747. His parentage is apparently unascertained.

[4] Possibly the Rev. Henry Smith, Rector of Churchtown, co. Louth.

[5] Wife or daughter of Philip Donogh of Newtown, co. Louth.

[6] See "Dict. Nat. Biog."

[7] The will of Samuel Head, "late of Dublin, now of Bordeaux, Esquire," was proved 1770.

[8] Rector of Finglas. He married 1735 Mary Browne.

[9] Wife of his brother William Tenison.

[10] Eldest son of William Tenison of Priorland, co. Louth, who was only son of Norbury Tenison.

[11] He married a daughter of testatrix.

[12] Daughter of William Eccleston of Dromshellon, co. Louth, and wife of John Ruxton of Ballyboney. She died 1777.

[13] The Right Hon. H. L. Rowley, M.P. Londonderry, son of Hercules Rowley, M.P. co. Derry. He married Elizabeth, only daughter of Clotworthy Upton, and aunt of Dorothy Upton, testator's wife. Mrs. Rowley was created Viscountess Langford and Baroness Somerhill (titles extinct). Her second son was Clotworthy Upton.

[14] Said, but erroneously, to be of the Gormanston family. (See Foster's "Peerage," sub Gormanston.)

[15] Will of Richard Bradshaw, "formerly of Cork and late of Dover Street, London, Esquire," proved 1782.

[16] Rev. James Norris, D.D., died 1789.

[17] Rev. Hugh Hill, D.D., of Cavendish Row, Dublin, 4th son of Samuel Hill of Culmore, Derry (ancestor of Baronets of St. Columb), by Mary, daughter of Hugh Rowley. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Edward Hall of the county Down family, and had issue.

[20] This Robert was, I presume, son of Robert Tenison, the younger brother of Bishop Richard Tenison.

Reviews.

Old Ingleborough. No. 1.—Tales by the Lonsdale Hermit (HERBERT M. WHITE, B.A.).
London : Elliot Stock, 62 Paternoster Row.

IT will be news to our archæological friends to find that two gentlemen of the vicinity of Ingleborough have determined upon a series of excavations upon the various tumuli and burrows, the site of Roman encampments and roads found in the neighbourhood. Mr. Herbert White is in hopes of proving that it was the centre of Roman civilization, strengthened as it was by what might be considered as natural positions of defence.

Our Author has penetrated in his rambles a land quite distinct from that he had left, and finds himself alone with perhaps a prehistoric sea-bird flying for its home in the neighbouring cliffs, or as he sees in the fell beneath him a prehistoric fish full of life and motion. So absorbed is he that had he suddenly met a party of Cook's excursionists all would have been prehistoric in his mind, for he says at that moment not a single human creature was known besides himself; "the foot of man had never trodden earthly soil or cleft earthly waters, the voice of man had never broken the awful silence," for he was absolutely alone. He revels in the sight of the small fish rushing away with startling eyes from the jaws of bigger fish (but is this not a libel upon the beneficent Almighty?) all without the knowledge of man, who centuries after will form museums of their remains or their handiwork; and thus he fancies comes on in time one of the momentous epochs in the history of our predecessors.

But we, like our Author, must hasten away from these charming rhapsodies of "all alone," and leave the rest to his readers, who will find in the work all the genealogical searchings that he places before them. We commend this book as being one of those thoughtful effusions that require time to indulge in to follow the Author fairly through it. It is well illustrated, one of them being a copy of a rare print of "Old Little," very interesting in its quaintness, with the massive rock behind it. Chapter XII. brings us at last to "Whose ancestors we are," and we now rest with the Author at home in our own century, which is only the twentieth after the early prehistoric picture he has throughout so eloquently portrayed. We wish the Work a good sale, and being nicely got up we trust the small price at which copies can be had (only 2s. 6d.) will warrant a second edition.

The Scottish Historical Review. No. 5. October 1904. Glasgow: James MacLehose and Sons.

THIS Part of the Review begins with a good account of the Scottish Peerage, from the time of the seven earls, and as the early charters have it, "By the grace of God, Earl of Fife." It is illustrated by the Royal Arms of Scotland and the arms of the Marquis of Angus, besides those of the Duke of Atholl. It is followed by an account of the Earls Ferry and a History of Montrose's Campaign, and an account of the Claverhouse Graham. Queries, Notes, and Comments form the finish of an interesting Part, in which are several illustrations.

A List of Emigrant Ministers to America, 1690—1811. By GERALD FOTHERGILL FOTHERGILL. London: Elliot Stock, 62 Paternoster Row.

THIS collection of Names of Clergymen, making in all seventy-two pp., and bound in white vellum, is got up in a style that more important works can ill afford. It starts unfortunately, for where the title gives the name of the Compiler as Fothergill, his own signature at end of the Introduction is printed Fottergill. Of course an author ought to know his own name best, therefore we may take that on the title-page as wrong.

From the Introduction we gather that Charles II. entrusted John, Lord Bishop of London, with providing and sending out ministers to the Colonies and islands of America with a grant from the Treasury of £20 towards their expenses of the passage. The number of emigrants finally amounted to 1200, among which were three clergymen of the Church of England, and in 1700 a memorial was sent expressing a wish for the amnesty of the ex-Quaker, Keith, who held his first service at Amboy on October 4th, 1704. One young clergyman, the son of Mr. Usher, the Society's Missionary at Bristol in New England, was taken prisoner by the French on his passage to England in 1757, and confined in the Castle of Bayonne, where he died of small-pox.

The List of the clergymen sent out is arranged alphabetically, and every care has been taken to carefully trace their identity, and the chief work consulted has been Foster's "Alumni Oxoniensis," besides which the records in England among the towns and villages have been searched, and the Public Record Office, including the Chancery Pleadings. Altogether the List has been made as perfect as possible, many of the emigrants starting from London and the outskirts, and the Compiler deserves great credit for the pains he has taken in verifying the particulars of each person given, having a collection of some 5000 notes shewing the connections of the families of England and America, the result of many years' research and correspondence.

The Journal of the Ex Libris Society. Vol. XIV., Parts 10 and 11, for October and November. London : A. and C. Black, Soho Square, W.

THESE two Parts are good examples of the work. In the October one are six excellent examples of plates, including Major W. H. R. Saunders (as a frontispiece), Henry Archibald Cockburn's, the New York Yacht Club Library plate, Sir William Hamilton's, Alice Bosvile's (by Captain Wilkinson), and the plate of Francis James Grant, Rothesay Herald, besides several legal bookplates.

The November Part has eight Festoon Bookplates, beside seven for identification, and the bookplate of Mr. C. J. Phillips, making a good Part.

A Transcript of the Parish Registers of Chesbourne from 1538—1636. With Introductory Notes, Appendices, and Index. By J. J. GARRETT-PIGGE. London : Elliot Stock.

WE have to thank the Author for the splendid addition to the Registers which are being issued by gentlemen and clergy, as well as by Societies. This volume is one of 436 pages, the children baptized occupying 170 pp., the marriages sixty pp. only, and the deaths forty-eight pp. ; the eight Appendices and the Index complete the book. One of the Appendices gives the proper names of those occurring in the book from 1538 up to 1900 among the electors of five other parishes. We can but admire the spirit of Mr. Garrett-Pigge in issuing the work as it is ; such a labour of love demands general recognition by the genealogical public, who we trust will subscribe amply to it, issued as it is by Mr. Elliot Stock as a work fitted for a place on every library table.

The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography. Vol. XII., No. 2. October 1904. The Virginia Historical Society, Richmond, U.S.A.

THE contents of this Part are purely Virginian in substance. It begins with a lengthy account of old "James Towne," the whole of it being apportionment of letters and various documents to plots, and a New Towne located on the same land. The Moravian journey is continued through Virginia, and the Report of the Proceedings of the Committee of Correspondence, and an article on Gleanings in England, with several others given of Virginians, make the Part interesting.

Fenland Notes and Queries. Vol. VI., Part 63. October 1904. Peterborough : George C. Caster, Market Place.

THIS useful little Magazine still keeps up our interest in detailing local news. Amongst other papers is one describing the Fen Birds three hundred years ago, also another respecting the King's Swans. Good notices are given of Rutland Reynolds, Bishop of Lincoln, and Richard Howland, Bishop of Peterborough.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record. Vol. XXXV., No. 4. October 1904. Society's Office : 226 West 58th Street, New York, U.S.A.

WE are glad to see that this Magazine is so well able to keep up its reputation for biographical matter as it is, for it has five families excellently given, besides a good portrait of Dr. William Frederick Holcombe. The Part also has a full Index to the Volume.

Catharine,[6] dau. of .... Will dated at York 23 Aug. 1773 and proved 4 Nov. 1774. (P.C.C., 409, Bargrave.) 2nd wife.

N.B.—This tentative effort towards arriving at a St. Eloy pedigree is submitted in the hope that it may elicit further information, for which the Compiler would be grateful. The principal difficulty arises from Peter St. Eloy's connubial lavishness. If the statement contained in private information that she was living in 1753 be accurate, then Henrietta Tenison must have been a fourth wife. As yet it remains impossible to apportion the children properly between these ladies.

[1] Pierre Le Blanc de Beaulieu's widow, Suzanne de Moranvillers, retired as a widow to Berlin with her four daughters, who all married. The other three re-appear in Chancery Proceedings (No. 2730, St. Eloy v. St. Eloy) in a suit brought by his mother and younger brothers against Peter St. Eloy, as Elizabeth Darennes, Susannah Barratt [de Baret], and Rachel Croyé. The husband of the last named, Captain de Croyé, from Sedan, had settled in Brandenburg. The Vestry Minute Book of Mitcham is sometimes signed by Peter St. Eloy and a Thomas Le Blanc. The latter was an Overseer in 1763, and died there in 1765, but in his will (P.C.C., 419, Rushworth) he describes himself as of Charter House Square.

[2] Judith Sayer was the ultimate heiress of property in Chilton, Bucks (Lipscomb's, "Buckinghamshire," vol. i., p. 136), which, under a decree in Chancery of 1768 was conveyed, about 1772, to a Mr. Pardoe.

[3] The "Gent. Mag." of 1736 says:—Peter St. Eloy to a daughter of Sir Edward Whitaker, and "niece to the Lord Chancellor."

[4] The St. Eloys called cousins with the Rev. Luke Trevigar, Canon of Chichester and Rector of Hurstmonceux, where a laudatory inscription of immense length, on a line with the Hare and Naylor mural tablets in the chancel, commemorates his death in 1772, and that of his wife in 1780. He was son of Luke Trevigar, M.D., of Islington, and Mary Pasquet.

[5] Barbara, relict of Richard Andrewes of West Sheen, names besides her sister Faure, and nieces Margaret and Dolly Faure, her sisters Holroyd, Atkinson, and St. Eloy.

[6] Names my niece Mary Keene, wife of the Bishop of Ely, dau. of the late Mr. Lancelot Andrews, the five children of my late brother-in-law Peter St. Eloy, and others.

Bookplate of P. D. Huet, 1630.*

Pierre Daniel Huet, the owner of the bookplate given, for his surname on the plate is Latinized, was born 8 February 1630, at Caen of noble parents. His father was Daniel Huet, then advanced in years, and his mother Isabella Pillon de Bertoville of Rouen. The Bishop had two sisters, Maria and Susanna, with a brother Francis, which latter, and one of the two sisters born after him, died in infancy. Huet became well-known as a classical scholar, and the list of his works occupies more than four columns in the British Museum Catalogue. Among these it is needless here to make any selection. His memoirs, written by himself in Latin, which were translated and added to by John Aiken, M.D., is among the above list, and from it these notes are chiefly taken.

He went with Samuel Bochart, the French theologian, to Sweden in 1652, but after had some differences with Bochart. He took Holy Orders in his forty-sixth year, became Abbot of Aulnai, in 1685 he was nominated Bishop of Soissons, but never consecrated, when four years later he exchanged that See for Avranches, which was nearer Caen; this See he abdicated in 1699 on account of ill-health and the place not agreeing with him, and was made Abbot of Fontenai. He appears to have hoped to be made a Cardinal, but was never elected, and after much illness he died 26 January 1721.

The arms are: Azure, three hawks' bells in fesse azure and in chief two ermine spots argent; or as in French blazon: D'azur d'trois grelots d'or, contreposes, surm. de deux mouch d'herm. d'arg.

This Norman family is quite distinct from that mentioned in "Le Nobillaire Universal," vol. xiii.

ARTHUR J. JEWERS.

SOME NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY.

William's elder brother Henry is proved to be son and heir of George Acworth of Potton, by direct statements to that effect on the Close Rolls, and he is no doubt the Henry Acworth admitted to the Inner Temple November 1557, and then described as of London. Henry quickly ran through what was left of the family estates in Bedfordshire. He appears to have married Dorothy, daughter of William and Audry Lytton, and the Lytton and other family connection into which his marriage brought him is shewn on the accompanying charts. In 1564 he is deforciant (Feet of Fines, Beds, 7 Eliz., Hilary) with his wife Dorothy for the manor of Halleyarde, otherwise Lymbere, and again for lands, etc., in Lymbere. In 1569 he appears in the Deputy-Keeper's Reports, Ireland, as grantee of the office of Customer of Waterford, where also he is shewn later as Commissioner for Delimitating Counties. Two letters from him at Waterford, and another from Dublin

* We have been favoured by Mr. GRIGGS of Peckham with this plate, and Mr. A. J. JEWERS has kindly searched at the British Museum for the above particulars, for which we tender him our best thanks.

Castle in 1574, which may be seen in the Calendars of State Papers, Ireland, are of interest in regard to the relations of this country at the time with Spain. A Spanish vessel had come, so he says, merely to spy out the land while pretending to be a trader. Henry appears to have died in 1589. He left no will, and administration of his estate is granted 15 April 1589 (P.C.C.) to John James, cousin. He seems to have had no children, and by his death Acworth connection with Bedfordshire ended. The continuation of the family through a younger brother has had to be looked for elsewhere, and very difficult it has been to find it.

A son and daughter, names unknown.

George Acworth, Merchant Taylor, was made free of the Company by apprenticeship to Thomas Acworth 8 July 1558. Proof of his parentage is missing, but he is described in the Company's records as "junior," and there can be little doubt they mean junior to George of Luton and Potton. Further support is lent to this supposition or certainty by the association of his name with that of George Acworth of Potton in a Recognizance dated 20 September 1560 (Close Roll, 568). His admission to the Merchant Taylors' Company is the first record found relating to him, and the date of his birth is unknown, but it is certain that he was, like others of his family, admitted later in life than was usual, for he must have been of age in 1560 to give a recognizance. As the one of his father's sons through whom alone the Acworth name has been continued to the present day, it is unfortunate that more full and exact information about him has not yet been found. In London the only other record of him is on 1 August 1562, when he is one of the sureties for his cousin Thomas Acworth on his institution to the Potton Vicarage, and he is then of the parish of St. Augustine, in which his uncle Thomas Acworth also resided. His next appearance is in quite another sphere, for he must be the same George Acworth who was Member of Parliament for Hindon, Wilts, from 1563 to 1567.* He is found next, after much diligent searching, at Plymouth, where his name figures on Subsidy Rolls in 1570 and 1580, and where in all probability he was carrying on business as a merchant. What led him to these changes can only be guessed, but that the man is the same in each set of circumstances is certain, for there was no other of his name who could have filled the places.

The will of George Acworth, proved 1593 (Archdeaconry Totnes), is, like all the wills of this Archdeaconry up to 1600, missing, and the next step in the family pedigree has, in the absence of the confirmation and proof it would give, to rest on circumstantial evidence only. Of George the only further information on record is that he had a son Gregory, baptized at St. Andrew's, Plymouth, 20 July 1582, who with one later appearance drops out of sight, and a daughter Mary, buried 5 January 1587-8.

John Acworth, sometime Storekeeper at Deptford, and who was, as there is every reason to believe, the son of George Acworth, Merchant Taylor, afterwards Member for Hindon, and lastly of Plymouth, came to London in 1601 or 1602. At that time he was in the household of Thomas Baker and of Elizabeth his wife, whose "near relative" he was. So much is told in a Chancery suit (Chancery Bills and Answers before 1714, James I., F. 10/63) in which Acworth was involved, as executor of Thomas Baker, who died in 1620. Baker's wife Elizabeth was the daughter of Richard Hichens. She was married at St. Andrew's, Plymouth, 20 May 1595, and her father's name figures with that of George Acworth at Plymouth in the Subsidy Rolls before mentioned of 1570 and 1580.

Hichens was connected with the set of sea adventurers who gave to Plymouth some of its mayors, and who sometimes were in Government service; and he it was most likely who obtained for his son-in-law a Government post in 1601, for that is the year in which Thomas Baker came to London, as well as John Acworth. From many indications the latter is younger than his "near relative" Elizabeth Baker, and very probably he was her nephew and had been an inmate of her house in Plymouth (where Baker and his wife are found till the end of 1600) from the time of his father's death. Other indications as to the Hichens' relationship are in the Bill (Chancery Bills and Answers, James I., B. 32/14) of William Bloyse of Ipswich, gent., and his son William Bloyse the younger, gent., and on behalf of John Maddocke, an infant under sixteen years of age, against Willmott Parker, Richard Bragg and Elizabeth his wife, and John Acworth; and in the wills of some of these persons. William Parker, deceased, husband of Willmott, and Thomas Baker had been trustees for Joan Hichens for her life of a messuage and land called Trethake in Cornwall. Joan, who died 1620, was the widow of Richard Hichens, who had died in 1613, and William the son of Richard and Joan Hichens had married Emlyn Trosse, who on his death in 1616 had married again to John Maddock, a merchant of Plymouth. Maddock died the next year (1617), and Bloyse father and Bloyse son, as his executors, are claiming the Trethake property from Willmott, widow of William Parker, John Acworth, executor of Thomas Baker, and Elizabeth Bragg, daughter of William and Willmott Parker, and her husband Richard Bragg.

William Hichens had several children, but they have not been traced. His widow Emlyn, who married again to Maddock, had a third husband, Christopher Wise, and to her, as Emlyn Wise, was granted a third administration of the will of Richard Hichens in 1627, this being required probably in connection with the Trethake property. Joan Hichens speaks of Willmott Parker as her "cousin," and William Parker is a legatee in 1611 of her husband Richard Hichens. Both Hichens and Parker were in their time Mayors of Plymouth—the former in 1600, the latter in 1602. William Parker died 24 September 1619, and his will is in P.C.C. (112, Parker). Some account of his life is in the "Dictionary of National Biography," and shews how he fitted out and commanded expeditions against the Spaniards, and after an adventurous life died finally in the service of the Government.

Both the Chancery suits here alluded to were after 1620, but long before that date John Acworth had obtained a Government post. In 1613 the office of storekeeper at Woolwich was "erected" for him with a salary of £20 a year, £4 extra for "botehire," and 20*d.* a day for diet. The patent states that he is to have the same powers as Henry Gilman at Chatham, and mentions that he has served Elizabeth and James for many years as Under-Storekeeper at Deptford. He appears afterwards to have held for a time the office of Storekeeper at Deptford while still retaining the Woolwich office, but in 1626 or 1627 he is appointed to succeed Mr. Newman to assist in keeping counter books of payments made by the Treasurer of the Navy, and in an inquiry held at this time into the affairs of the Navy he is described as late Keeper of the Stores at Deptford. In February 1637 he petitioned the King for a grant of the reversion of the Clerk of the Acts' place in the Navy, stating that he had served His Majesty and Queen Elizabeth these 35 years in keeping the Stores at Deptford and Woolwich, etc., which petition was refused. The next year, 1638, he died, and a letter from Thomas Smith to Sir John Pennington, dated Sion House 4 September 1638, seems to shew that he fell a victim to one of the minor visitations of the plague: "Since the death of Mr Edisbury Mr Acworth, storekeeper of Woolwich, is dead. The mortality decreases not: the Country is worse than the City."

Acworth's will, which is nuncupative, or made by word of mouth, is in P.C.C., 39, Harvey. His place and date of burial are Deptford 4 September 1638, and at Deptford his first wife Susan was buried on 6 January 1631-2. His second wife and relict was Constance, of whom no further trace has been found. By Susan John Acworth had three sons, John, Allyn, and William, as proved by an indenture dated 28 September 1638, which is enrolled on Close Roll C 3177. By his second wife he had a son who was also named John, baptized at Deptford 30 January 1633-4, and who must be the John Acworth* "the elder" buried at Woolwich 19 January 1671-2, and of whom no other records have been found after that on the Close Roll C 3177 above mentioned. Nothing is known of the parentage of either of the wives of John Acworth the storekeeper, but an indenture of 5 August 1626 made by John Ithell, Freeringe, Essex, clothier, on his marriage with Francis, widow of John Thompson of Chatham, to Kenrick Edisbury, and John Acworth, suggests that he may be related to some of the parties to it. The indenture enrolled 28 September 1638, which gives the names of Acworth's sons, is an agreement concerning property at Wapping, left by his will to his son John* "the younger." The history of this property, consisting chiefly of a wharf, is of interest because it shews the parentage of Acworth's old patron Thomas Baker. Sir William Winter, father of Sir Edward Winter, father of John Winter, had bought on 25 April 1573, as recorded in Close Roll 2555, together with Christopher Baker, father of Thomas Baker, the wharf and lands in question, and the profits were to be shared between them—Sir William Winter and Christopher Baker.

On Close Roll 2555 is enrolled a new agreement between John Winter of Lydney of the one part and John Acworth and Richard Baker, son of Thomas Baker, of the other part, and eventually Acworth seems to have taken over the property himself. The purchase in 1573 of the wharf and ground appears to shew that Baker's father was closely connected with Sir William Winter at the time, and suggests the speculation whether George Acworth of Plymouth, John's father, was first attracted to that port by the hand he may have taken in some of the enterprises of the naval set there, whether indeed he may not have joined himself in some of their expeditions to account for his being lost to sight for a time. Passing reference must be made to one more Chancery suit (Bdle. H 54/25, Charles I.), shewing that John Acworth at one time had some hand in a large scheme for reclaiming marsh lands in several counties. Sir John Heydon brings an action against him arising out of this scheme, but the papers, which are long, are of no special interest. Before proceeding to trace the histories of the sons of John Acworth a short notice must be given to Ann, believed to be his sister, and to Edward Acworth, who can only be his brother.

Ann Acworth married Edward, fourth son of Francis Staresmore of Froulesworth, Leicestershire, and John Nichols's History of the County states that the issue of the marriage were Francis, baptized 1602, and Nathaniel. The accompanying Staresmore pedigree shews among others of Edward's relatives an uncle Henry Gilman, and this man mentions as a legatee in 1583 Christopher Baker and Sir William Winter and John Hawkins, and is perhaps a relative of the Henry Gilman who was Storekeeper at Chatham, as mentioned in the Patent to John Acworth. Other circumstances there are, too, which point to Staresmore connection with the naval set with whom it is believed George Acworth of Plymouth was connected. Ann was in all probability George's sister, but no proof thereof and no further records of her have been found.

* "The younger" in 1638 with relation to his brother John, he had become "the elder" before 1672 in relation to a nephew John.

Edward, the son as supposed of George Acworth of Plymouth, was buried at King's Lynn 10 January 1644-5. His name appears on a Subsidy Roll of 22 James I. as of Checker Ward, Lynne. Administration of his estate is granted 4 February 1645 (P.C.C.) to his relict Elizabeth. The only other record of him found as yet is in State Papers, Domestic, where an entry shews that he and others obtained a Warrant for Letters of Marque for the "Desire of Lynn" on 23 April 1629. The likelihood of his being the son of George Acworth of Plymouth is made almost a certainty by two ascertained facts. His relict Elizabeth, who was probably not his first wife, mentions in her will that he had a brother-in-law of the extremely rare name of Trosse, found only in the west country, and which has occurred in these pages before in a Hichens-Trosse marriage, and she mentions also two sons of John Acworth of Deptford as her kinsmen. The will shews many other legatees with names that seem to indicate relationships, which, however, cannot be found; but Elizabeth's chief legatee, her grandson, has a name so uncommon, if it is correctly written in the register, that it should be easily discoverable wherever else it may occur: it is Wrigler. Elizabeth leaves sundry charitable bequests, and she desires that she may be buried beside her husband, but this wish was not carried out, so far as the Church Register of Burials is evidence thereof. From her will it appears likely that her husband had followed his calling of the sea to the last, and Elizabeth leaves his "loadstone whistle and chain" and her share of a craft that had been his (but was not the same for which he had obtained Letters of Marque) to her grandson John Wrigler.*

John, the eldest son of John Acworth of Deptford, was probably born about 1610, and he died some time before 8 April 1642, on which date his widow proves her father's will. He went back to the West Country, whence his father had come, to find a wife—Ede or Edith Hele, daughter of Walter Hele, whom he married at St. Andrew's Church at Plymouth on 26 April 1638. At the same church their daughter Susanna was baptized on 10 July 1638, and there too she was buried on 31 March 1643. When the father died is not known, but his widow Edith married again on 5 July 1643 at St. Andrew's, Plymouth, to Richard Meane.

Allyn Acworth, the second son of John of Deptford, was born on 25 July 1613 (Register of Merchant Taylors' School). He entered Merchant Taylors' School 11 March 1627-8; matriculated Magdalen College, Oxford, 4 November 1631; was B.A. from New Inn Hall 14 May 1633; M.A. 19 January 1635-6. In 1656 he was appointed Vicar of St. Nicholas', Rochester, and in 1662 was made Vicar of Wandsworth. Mention of his name occurs some half dozen times in State Papers, Domestic, and in other record publications. He died in 1674, and was buried 10 July at Wandsworth, where his relict Cicely was also buried in 1689 or 1690 (Churchwardens' Books, Wandsworth†). His will, dated 26 February 1673-4 and proved 3 August 1674, is in P.C.C. (96, Bunce). Allyn had a son John, from whom must have descended the Acworths of Wandsworth and Westminster, who became extinct in the male line early in the last century. What is known of these descendants will be stated after the following brief account of his other sons, who all died unmarried. The narrative will then return to Allyn's younger brother William, from whom probably are descended the Acworth family existing to-day.

Allyn's younger sons were: Allyn, baptized 19 January 1650-51 at St. Nicholas', Rochester; Samuel, baptized same place 11 April 1652; Daniel, baptized same place 3 September 1653; William, buried at Wandsworth 12 April 1666, of whom all that is known is that he died of the plague. Of the three first Allyn appears in 1677 in Hotten's "List of the Merchants of London." He was then in Burchin Lane, and various transactions recorded throughout his life shew him to have been engaged in business, large for that period. He was buried at Wandsworth 1711 or 1712 (Churchwardens' Books). Samuel died young, and was buried at Wandsworth

* The writer has tried hard to trace this name, but has not found a single occurrence of it elsewhere.

† Parish Registers of Wandsworth over a long period are missing, but during this interval the Churchwardens' Books supply their place to some extent. Extracts from them have been published by Mr. C. T. Davis.

1678 or 1679 (Churchwardens' Books). Daniel went while still young to Bombay, where he seems to have stayed all his life, dying there in 1700. His will in P.C.C. (94, Noel), which mentions as legatees some of the higher officials of the East India Company, suggests that he may himself have been in that service.

John Acworth, the eldest son of Allyn of Rochester and Wandsworth, and the only one who left a family, was a legatee in 1700 of his brother Daniel, and in 1711 of Allyn. Not much is known of him, but there are reasons to suppose he was in business as a wine importer, and the following baptisms must be of his children, his cousin and namesake, the only other parent possible for them, being fully accounted for elsewhere: William, 5 November 1674; Lucy, 27 December 1675; Ann, 7 February 1680; Thomas, 4 February 1683; all at St. Margaret's, Rochester. The last named is perhaps the Thomas Acworth who in August 1733 married .... Garbett ("Gentleman's Magazine"), and who has not been otherwise identified. Besides these he had a son named after himself, who will be noticed hereafter. On 10 April 1717 administration of his estate is granted to his relict Elizabeth (Cons. of Surrey), and the John Acworth buried at Lambeth Old Church 8 April 1717 must be he, and can be no other. Except John and Thomas his children probably all died in infancy.

The dexter coat in the above shield on the monument of Peter Smith is not any coat of Smith, and as the colours may not be right it is difficult to attempt an identification. The impaled coat, if we alter the tinctures to Or, on a cross azure quarterly pierced of the field four caltraps of the first, is a Ball, a name that occurs in the inscription, and which we may suppose to be the maiden name of his wife ; but we have nothing more to guide us, for the will of Peter Smith, of which a brief abstract is appended, gives us no help.

Peter Smith of S. Anne in the Liberty of Westminster, Esq. Will dated 5 Dec. 1700. All estate to wife Rachel Smith. Son Theodore Smith if he lives to be 21 or marries with his mother's consent, he is to have such estate as his mother thinks good, but he is never to sell or part with the £100 testator purchased "for him in the life survivorship in the Million Act." Wife executrix.

NOTE.—The family of Cockburn, belonging to Berwickshire, settled at Sunderland early in the nineteenth century. William Cockburn of Sunderland died in 1856, leaving by his wife Jane (who died 27 December 1836, aged 53 years), daughter of Richard Thompson, Captain R.N., four sons (of whom Thomas abovementioned was the youngest) and three daughters. Mr. Cockburn's bookplate bears his arms : *Argent, three cocks gules, impaling, Per pale or and argent, an eagle displayed gules. Crest : A cock gules.

Monumental Inscriptions in Corsham Church.†‡

When these were printed some twelve years ago, the compiler seeing only bars on the impalement of KINGTON, on that monument in the north chapel, jumped to the conclusion that it was meant for FULLER, whereas it should be credited to PANTON, John Kington's wife being Mary, daughter of Charles Panton of Batheaston ("Wilts N. & Q.," iv., 437). On recently visiting the church we could not distinguish the crowns of KINGTON, and perceived only patches of red on its impalement, so that the arms given to FULLER must be transferred to the next monument. The arms as borne by PANTON occur on some monuments in Batheaston Church, viz. : Gules, two bars ermine, on a canton sable a moulin-de-fer argent, a bordure of the last, PANTON ; and, Ermine, three chevrons gules, SELFE of Melksham ; impaling, Gules, two bars ermine, on a canton argent a moulin-de-fer sable, PANTON.

On the Hulbert monument, placed in the chancel by the Goldney family, it is stated that "John Gallimore Hulbert married Elizabeth Kington of Stowell." We are informed by a correspondent, a member of the Kington family, that this is incorrect, "for John Gallimore Hulbert married at Atworth (4 July 1765) Elizabeth, daughter of Anthony Kington of Atworth, co. Wilts, and sister of Anthony Kington of Widcomb Manor. Elizabeth, daughter of Anthony Kington of Stowell, Corsham, and Notton, all co. Wilts, died unmarried 8 September 1823, and has a monument in St. Mary Redcliff, Bristol."

In the north chapel is a large handsome alabaster monument. Under a flat stone canopy on the dexter side are two mutilated figures kneeling face to face. On the sinister side are four kneeling female figures with ruffs, the hindmost one without a head. Above this monument a helmet with crest, An elephant statant, with a shield of six quarterings, viz. : 1 and 6, Sable, a chevron between three fishes naiant argent, a chief or, COBB ; 2, A fess between three birds volant ; 3, Blank or illegible ; 4, A fess between six fleurs-de-lys ; 5, A cross bottony.

On a dexter obelisk above the canopy is a shield, blank or illegible. On the sinister one, A bend wavy, in chief three crescents ermine. Over a pillar separating the two groups, crest of COBB; on either side a shield, the dexter blank or illegible, the sinister COBB; impaling, A fess between three fleurs-de-lys gules.

On dexter side are four shields hanging from ring and ribbons: 1, COBB; impaling, A cross bottony between four .... or; 2, COBB; impaling, Quarterly, ... in each quarter a stag statant; 3, COBB (overwritten COBB); 4, COBB; impaling, Argent, two bars sable (overwritten COBB .... on). On the sinister side are also four like shields: 1, COBB; impaling, A fess gules between three birds volant sable (overwritten COBB and RYVE); 2, COBB; impaling, Sable, three flagons argent (overwritten COBB and Le .... tler); 3, COBB; impaling, Azure, a bend wavy or, in chief three crescents ermine (overwritten WM. COBB and WILDE); 4, COBB, with label of three points (overwritten WILLIAM COBB). Below the kneeling figures are also three like shields: 1, Blank; impaling COBB; 2, Ditto (overwritten WYNIFREDE); 3, Blank. All or most of these shields seem to have had some name written over them.

Heare lyeth buried the bodie of ALICE COBB, wydow, sometyme wyfe of WILLIAM COBB, Esq., descended from the ancient family | of the COBBS of Sandringham in the Covnty of Norfolke, by whome she was the mother of sixteen children, seven sons and nine davghters, | all which she lived to see bvried bvt three onely. The right worshippfvll Sir WILLIAM COBB, Knight, her onely sonne, and Dame CATHERINE, whoe maryed | to Sir GEORGE RVSSELL of Bedford shier, Knight, and Dame MARGARETT, whoe maryed to Sir RICHARD CHOMLEY of Yorkshire, Knight. She | lived a made ninteen years, and a wyfe twenty-six years, and after her hvsband's death, whoe desced in October, Ao. 1598, she lived a widow thirty | yeares, havinge performed the parte bothe of a constante lovinge wife, and a kinde and carefvll mother, restinge now with the | Almightie, whome her greatest care was ever to serve and feare. Shee died the 23 of October, Ao. D'ni 1627.

Mr. Harold Brakspear, F.S.A., informs us that the above was placed here under his superintendence in 1899, when the chancel of Adderbury Church was restored; it was afterwards removed to Corsham Court. Alice Cobb, a daughter of Otwall Wild of Oldham, co. Lancs, was buried in Adderbury chancel. The present Lord Methuen is descended from Christian, the second daughter and coheiress of Sir George Cobb of Adderbury, the late baronet, who was accidentally drowned when he was over ninety.

The arms and crest of COBB, as given in Bloomfield's "Norfolk," Farrer's "Church Heraldry of Norfolk," and the printed "Visitations of Norfolk, 1563, 1589, 1613,"* are different from those on the monument, but the latter are given by Burke, and Anthony Wood, who mentions an impalement by William Cobb, ob. 1658-9, of Quarterly azure and or, four stags trippant of the first (? counterchanged), FLOOD. According to Burke's "Extinct Baronetage" the fishes of COBB are described as dolphins embowed, but others blazon them as cobs, herrings, or pickerings, all naiant. Geoffrey Cobb of Sandringham marries a Ryvett, and has a son William, who marries a Le Butler. If this monument is not returned to its proper place, we should like to see a notice placed close by stating whence it came and the date of its "anchorage" in Corsham.

The Rev. H. J. Gepp, Vicar of Adderbury, near Banbury, writes: "This monument was at one time in the chancel of this Church. It was built in front of the handsome sedilia, discovered when the monument fell to pieces (the family not caring to restore it), and the sedilia were repaired and restored by the Warden and Fellows of New College in 1837. The pieces were kept here until 1879, when they were sent to Lord Methuen. There are other monuments to the Cobb family in the chancel—flat stones."

Anthony Bate and Robert Bate were not father and son ; they were brothers. Anthony was a Citizen and Clothworker of London, whose will, dated 29 April, was proved in the P.C.C. 13 June 1598. He had other brothers named Nathaniel, Edward, Thomas, William, and Matthew, and two sisters, Margery, wife of William Scattergood, and . . . ., wife of Benedict Quarles.

Robert Bate's will, dated 21 June, was proved in the P.C.C. 14 October 1626.

Hugh Armstrong was of Thorp, co. Notts.

It was Nathaniel Bate the younger (born 1631 ; died 1676) who was put down for the proposed Order of the Royal Oak.

Catharine, second wife of Nathaniel Bate the elder, was the widow of Andrew Zinzan.†

Thomas Bate of Gray's Inn died unmarried. The siege of Shelford House was on 27 October 1645.

The name of the wife of Robert Bate was Mary Wakelin of Crakemarsh, co. Stafford, who was aged 23 on the 22 April 1665. (Marriage Licence, Vicar-General.)

The Rev. Richard Bate entered Magdalen College, Cambridge, 6 June 1668, A.B. 1671, A.M. 1675. In 1679 he held the living of Belchamp Walter in Essex, and died the next year.

The Rev. Thomas Bate was presented to the Rectory of Swarkeston, co. Derby, by Sir John Harpur of Calke, Bart., 10 August 1720 ; died unmarried 6 November 1727 and was buried at Calke. M.I. His will, dated 23 October 1727, was proved in London 1 April 1728. He bequeathed his library to the parish church of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and the building, long since destroyed, which contained it was erected in 1730. (See "Ex Libris Journal," vol. xv., p. 3.)

James Bate's will, dated 20 October 1753, with a codicil, dated 20 September 1757, was proved at Leicester 4 October 1757.

The husband of Anne Bate was Richard, son of William Jackson of Coleraine.

The Rev. Anthony Johnson was presented to the Rectory of Swarkeston by Sir John Harpur 30 March 1728, and his burial is recorded in the Swarkeston Register, as Rector, on 7 April 1732.

Pages 491 and 497.

The husband of Elizabeth Bate was Joseph Palmer, sometime a King's Messenger, born about 1683. The licence for their marriage was dated 1 Nov. 1708 (Bishop of London, Marriage Licence Affidavit Books), and they were to marry at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, but the record of the marriage cannot be found there. He died in London December 1759, and administration was granted out of the P.C.C. to his daughter Ann Drury, widow, on 23 April 1761. He had a son Joseph, named in the will of the Rev. Thomas Bate, buried at Ashby 11 October 1728.

Reviews.

Abstracts of Wills in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury at Somerset House, London, England. Register Soame, 1620. Edited by J. HENRY LEA. New England Historic Genealogical Society, Boston, U.S.A. 1904.

THIS is a portly volume of upwards of 600 pp., compiled by Mr. J. Henry Lea, who refers to Colonel Chester and Mr. Henry F. Waters as having gone over the same ground before him, but not so exhaustive as others thought was sufficient, and they have had to re-work all the ground over again and again for special facts which the latter desired to establish.

The Author has given twenty years' study exclusively to English Research, and his experience is not to leave a straw or a perplexity to delay the ardent searcher. He has completed the first volume, "Soame," covering 1620, and he hopes, if life be spared him, to complete nine or ten more volumes, so as to finish the decade to 1630, of which the second volume, "Dale, 1621," is now in hand. As he says, much must depend upon the reception accorded by the scholarly public to this volume, and their willingness to subscribe for future issues; but apart from the immense labours of Mr. Lea in completing this present volume, facts ought to be apparent that all he does and all the New England Society is willing to publish ought to be assured of that support, both in England and America, as to make the project successful. It is a huge clientèle to appeal to, and the encouragement to proceed ought to be undeniably given. We think we are not asking too much if we appeal to all the Genealogical Societies in England to subscribe for at least two volumes a year to the New England Historic Society, and judging from what we know of the American book world, the Societies there will gladly second such a movement, and thus place the earnest endeavours of such ardent Editors as Mr. J. Henry Lea on a sound basis to proceed.

The Editor thanks all around who gave him any assistance, and he trusts that every one of his readers will find some "nugget" of worth in the mine which may make his labour of love of both use and interest to them, and he invites criticism and corrigenda on every point possible. Every folio in the Register is given, and each name is given, with a full account rendered such as can be depended upon. The folios extend to 120, and the number of persons' wills to 1366, and all that is comprised in the Soame Register of 1620. There are ample indices furnished of 140 pp. in treble columns, and altogether the volume is worth securing by every genealogist.

Heralds' College and Coats of Arms, regarded from a Legal Aspect. Third Edition, Revised and Enlarged. By W. P. W. PHILLIMORE, M.A., B.C.L. Office: 124 Chancery Lane, E.C.

THIS book of reference is in its Third Edition, to which has been added a Postscript and an Appendix. Being issued still at a shilling places it easily within the reach of all desiring information about the College and heraldry generally, and it ought to have a large circulation. The Author treats the subject on its historical ground, and is not above being humorous, for, alluding to Sir George Sitwell's investigation of the term "gentleman," he suggests that it is synonymous with "freeman." It follows then, as all men are free now, there is no obstacle to a crossing-sweeper taking to himself such a coat as "Gules, a pair of brooms in saltire covered with mud proper," and being his own master, and not dependent on a yearly wage like Government officials, such as a pursuivant of arms with the large salary of £13 19s. 0d.!

Of course we are aware that it is said that Heralds' College has granted arms to a pill-making chemist, to a doormat dealer, and even to the late Mr. Barney Barnato, who from bottles of rum given to the natives for gold and diamonds realized such a fortune that overbalanced him into the sea—"and his end was peace." But as the Author says, those who wish "to play the game of heraldry may fairly be asked to play according to the rules, which can easily be learnt from the officers, from judgments in the Courts of Law, and from the statutes of the realm." We know personally how gladly the officers at Heralds' College will answer any question, decipher many a hieroglyphic, and otherwise help the enquiring public to an investigation taking hours of their time, and all without fee or reward. This present edition with its Postscript and Addendum bring sundry references up to date.

Index to Obituary and Biographical Notices in Jackson's Oxford Journal from 1753—1853. Compiled, Printed, and Published by EDWARD A. B. MORDAUNT. London: 20 Doughty Street, W.C. 1904.

WHY any person should look upon "Jackson's Oxford Journal" as worth while immortalizing a century after by publishing the Obituary comprised in its pages passes our comprehension. The Compiler appears to be his own printer, and he makes up his mind that none of his critics would have taken the trouble to print such a work; and there he is quite right, nor would any of them have allowed such a poor specimen of composition to pass into public life. We can understand the Indices to The Times being issued, with all its princely literature, but that we fear does not pay its ardent compiler, but where can we see a hundred years of "Jackson's Oxford Journal" to refer to in case of a genealogical hunt? The Compiler seems to be an ardent admirer of the "Newgate Calendar," judging from the number of executions he gives, at Tyburn and elsewhere, and the compilation seems to us to be unworthy of the immense trouble taken by him.

The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography. Vol. XII., No. 3. January 1905. The Virginia Historical Society, Richmond, U.S.A.

THE Committee of Correspondence still have a lengthy paper in this Number, and there are letters of Jefferson relative to conferences with the Indians. The Moravians are still travelling through Virginia, mostly on virgin soil, without roads, across rivers, and often blocked through fallen trees; in some places up huge hills, and then in descending tying on a large tree to the back of the waggon, and then all of the travellers laying hold of that, and thus descending safely. The land they were trekking for was a grant of 100,000 acres to these Moravians made by Lord Granville in 1751, and accepted by them. They first went accompanied by a Bishop, a surveyor, and two guides, and mustered among the party two ministers and a physician, and on their venturesome journey they baptized the children of the early settlers. The settlement to which they had arrived was named Wachovia in North Carolina, and a history of it was published in New York in 1902. The genealogical notes respecting the Brookes family of Virginia, and those on the families of Fielding and Davis, make the Part very interesting. It ends with an account of the annual proceedings, balance sheet, and list of members, etc.

Fenland Notes and Queries. Vol. VI., Part 64. January 1905. Peterborough: George C. Caster, Market Place.

THIS Part is enhanced by six miniatures of the Vernatti family, with nine coats of arms, and a plate of the frontispiece of an album. Sir Philibert Vernatti was founder of the Church at Santoft, near Hatfield Chase, erected for the use of the tenants of the Participants, who were chiefly Walloons and French Protestants who had fled from their own countries. This family afterwards undertook some of the drainage of the Fens, but the Lincolnshire people rebelled against them, and threatened to kill all the servants of the Dutch, and troops were sent to protect them. The Fens since their time have changed, and have improved since Pepys visited his cousins at Parson Drove in 1663. The Rev. Frederic Jackson was vicar there in 1844, and he died in 1904, and is said to have never missed a Sunday Service. He was the survivor of a family of eighteen, and, when obliged to give up horse exercise, he missed his daily drives, for it was to that he owed his great vitality through having plenty of fresh air. His three predecessors and he covered a period of 212 years, and "Mike the grave-digger," the old sexton, opened the church door when Mr. Jackson first entered and he dug his grave. So much for the health of Parson Drove. These incidents are, among others equally interesting, given in this Part.

THIS Part commences with an excellent portrait of Mr. Samuel Putnam Avery, who from being in the office of a banknote engraver took to general engraving, and finally to the study of prints and pictures. In the latter he rose to eminence and opulence, for he founded the Avery Architectural Library at Columbia College, which comprises about 15,000 volumes given in memory of a deceased son. It is said there is no collection like it in the world. He likewise gave his collection of prints and books now in the Lenox Library, soon to be attached to the New York Public Library. We must leave his other deeds to his countrymen to revel in, only mentioning that they do not pass over without recognition, that on his seventy-fifth birthday in 1897 a gold medal of artistic design was struck, and presented to him by seventy-five leading citizens in New York. He was going away for the sea air, but illness compelled him to stop at his house, 4 East Thirty-eighth Street, where he died in August 1904, surrounded by the things that he loved.

This Part is rich also in accounts of the De Riemer family from 1640 to 1903; Edward Fuller and his descendants from 1691; the Horton family from 1680, and the Wemple Genealogy from 1780. There is a good portrait of Mrs. Anne Mott, a noble helper to the poor prisoners of war, taken at various times. Altogether the Part is an excellent one.

The Journal of the Ex Libris Society. Vol. XIV., Part 12, and Vol. XV., Part 1, for December 1904 and January 1905. London: A. and C. Black, Soho Square, W.

THE Journal still keeps up its issues, but there is no doubt that the Society does not attempt to help the Editor so much as it might, hence the Parts are in arrear. The frontal arms in the December Part is signed W. K. Dvxford, of a knight on horseback, and the explanation was to be given in the January Part, but we have not seen it in that Part. The arms of Mr. E. H. Holthouse, designed by Miss Cooper of Highgate, is a good example of engraving, and with the bridge spanning the waters and St. Peter's at Rome in the distance makes an effective picture. The Heathfield plate is well done, and those of the Duchess of Roxburgh and of the Marquess of Donegal, as an introduction to the January Part, are both worthy of their time. The plates for identification run up now to 572. The plate of the Cadets' Library, Royal Naval College, Osborne, is a good design by Mr. Charles E. Eldred of Plymouth.

Vadelectus, Valectus, Vadlet, Valet, Varlet,

This honourable title originally meant the eldest son and heir of the nobility, which were wards of the king, or of the chief lords, according to the tenure of the estate, whether in capite or otherwise. They were candidates gradnating for knighthood, and were subject to customs and services under the Feudal system. As the acceptations attached to the name in its many forms of spelling vary in the most remarkable way, it may perhaps prove interesting to draw up, however imperfectly, a dated list of instances. It seems impossible to produce order out of chaos. At the beginning of our search we find Valectus to be the most noble title, the heir and the hope of mediæval chivalry—a golden guinea! After six hundred years it appears as the reproachful epithet of the lowest menial—a forged farthing! And in later times the values attached seem to have overlapped each other. At the same date, within a few years before or after, we find it applied in the most inextricable manner, either as a term of respectful honour or of scathing obloquy.

I had better start with the first original of the term. The derivation of the word is quite clear. I find Mr. Skeat, also Mons. A. Brachet (in his invaluable "Etymological Dictionary," 1882, crowned by the French Academy), exactly agree with my conclusions: Vassalus was a dependent; Vassalettus was the son and heir—the young vassal—the future holder of the estates; and in the ordinary course of change and decay in our language produced Vadlectus, Vadlet, and all our varied spellings, eventually down to Valet and Varlet! We see then that it was the direct result of the Feudal system. When Hugh Capet found that the throne he had usurped was tottering amid the restless energies of his nobility, he devised the scheme of granting to them hereditary tenures of their fiefs and titles subject to knight services to himself. Originally their fiefs were held yearly, afterwards for life, and eventually (in 988) in jure hereditario. Hugh Capet thus ensured his own security, and created the holding and existence of vassals, involving also in due time vadelettus, the young heir to the hereditary lands and honours. (Spelman's Feuds, cap. ii., p. 5, ed. 1727, 2nd part.)

This system was introduced into England, and for precisely the same reasons, by William the Conqueror, but I have not found any instance of our title of quite so early a date, because no documentary evidences have come down to us which would be likely to mention the future heirs of hereditary estates.

In Norman-French poetry, tales, and chronicles the name is found as Vallet, Vadlet, and Vaslet (and Vaslez—plural). They occur as the attendants on kings, queens, and great nobles—as indeed they always seem to have been in early times. A vassal knight committed his eldest son, and probably all his sons, to the care of some other distinguished knight, and, where the tenure was in capite, the king so committed them that they might live in some great household and learn all the usages of chivalry. The royal perquisite of these wardships was a source of income to the king, but written records of such receipts do not extend to this early date.

* Communicated by GEO. GRAZEBROOK, Esq., F.S.A.

Circa 1220 ?

In "Le Contes dou Roi Constant L'Empereur" (the story of the King Constant the Emperor), which is early in the next century, Varlet occurs in the singular, and for plural Varles.

We now come to exact dates from records. Mr. Stacey Grimaldi, in 1830, printed under the name of Rotuli de Dominabus et pueris et puellis de donatione Regis—Ladies, sons and daughters of the gift of the King. This was printed from Harl. MS. 624, being two of the tracts included therein, Nos. 37 and 40, which had been transcribed about 1625 for Sir Simonds D'Ewes; and the Harl. MS. headings give "viduis (widows) Regi spectantibus," and again, "Tenentium Regis in capite," "de anno 31 Henry ij., ex parte Rememoratoris Domini Regis." Now this gives us the exact definition of Valectus—the heir of a tenant in chief. When such a tenant died the king held his estates until he was of full age to do and had done homage, after which livery of his lands was granted to him. (Charter Henry I.; Spelman on Feuds and Tenures, cap. xv.)

Seeing that Stacey Grimaldi had not followed the exact title of these transcripts, and feeling strongly that "valectis" and not "pueris" should be there, inasmuch as the eldest sons only were "Regi spectantibus," and knowing that vast quantities of records from many receptacles, which had been lost in obscurity for perhaps hundreds of years, have now been gathered into Fetter Lane; and, being now myself distant from London, I had a search made to ascertain whether Valectis was or was not the original wording, when the twelve Rotuli were discovered, one for each county, and stitched together, with this original endorsation: "hoc indubitate apparet ex Collatione huius Rotuli cum Rotulo Magno' Pipæ de Anno 31 Henry 2" (1185). (King's Remembrancer, Knight's Fees, bdle. 1, No. 2, Record Office.)

I have only to remark on this, that as the great Rolls of the Pipe are a statement of debits and credits to arrive at the true balance due to the king, therefore payments for fines must have accrued in order to appear upon that Roll. The title Vadlectis ought really to have been used upon this Roll, because "pueris" does not convey the conditions.

I quote a Deed of Pardon and Concord, 1 Henry III., dorso m. 13: "Concordia inter Regem & Radulphum de Normanvil, viz. quod Rad. tenebit in servitio Regis Geroldum & Radulphum milites, filios suos, quamdiu guerra sua duraverit, per sic, quod Rex ei remittat 200 marcas quas debebant Regi Johanni de fine pro redemptione dicti Geroldi et per sic deberetur; Thomas filius dicti Radulphi vaslettus in Custodia Regis qui similiter morabatur in servitio Regis cum predictis Geroldo & Radulpho fratribus suis." This shews us that the eldest son only was Vaslettus and in custody of the king, to be followed on his death by the next heir.

Bracton, our great Legal authority, in Tractatus de Corona, cap. i., sec. 3, in the Articles which the jury of twelve knights ought to answer, gives: "De valectis et puellis, qui sunt & esse debent in Custodia domini Regis—qui sunt maritati et qui illos habent & per quem et quantum terræ eorum valent. De dominabus (ladies of a manor) quæ sunt et esse debent de donatione domini regis sive sint maritatæ sive non, et si sint maritatæ, quibus et per quem et quantum terræ illarum valent per annum."

It will give my readers a lively picture of social matters in Feudal times if I give a quotation from the Rotuli de Oblatis et Finibus, 2 Johis (1200-1):

"The widow of Ralph Cornhill gave the King 200 marks, 3 palfreys, etc., NOT to marry Godfrey de Louvaine; but he at same date sent to the King 400 marks that she might be compelled to marry him." Such marriages, compulsory or otherwise, were necessary in order to ensure the knight's services accruing from the lands, and these could not be performed by a woman.

The Abbé Migne ("Lexicon ad scriptores Mediæ Latinitatis," Paris, 1866) gives this apt definition of Valetus, "on nominait ainsi les fils des grands Seigneurs avant q'ils fussent armés Chevaliers," and gives a reference, A.D. 1296, Valleteria=Valeti conditio.

1331.

"Sciant, etc. . . . . quod Ego Henricus comes Lancastriæ, Leicester et Nichol Senescallus Angliæ. Dedimus, etc., dilecto Valetto nostro Johanni le Blount novem acras terræ cum pertinentiis in Holland in foresta nostra de Duffield, etc. Dat. apud Hegham Ferrers 3 die Junii 5 Edw. III." (Penes Walter Kirkham Blount, Bart.)

1352.

Pardon by William de Mountagu, Earl of Sarum, Lord of Man and of Dynebegh: "Sachetz qe pour le bone et greable service qe nostre bien ame Vallet Richard Dorel ad fait a nostre trescher Seignour et Pière," etc. (Madox Formulare, DCCV.)

1388-9.

Will. Hunt, "Varlect del Chambre nostre Seigneur le Roy." (Clause Roll, 12 Ric. II., m. 43 dorso.)

1396-7.

By a repealed Statute, 20 Ric. II., cap. 2, the word Varlets used for yeomen or yeomen servants.

"Suspensus est eo tempore Miles Rogerus Clarendon et cum eo suus armiger et valettus." (Selden Titles, ed. 1672, fo. 691, quoting from Walsingham.)

1405-6.

Thirning, 7 Henry IV., fo. 8, that a lord at the font knighted his own son, and said, "Be a good Knight, for you shall never be a good Esquire" (Selden Titles, fo. 689). I quote this, for it bears upon the question as to Valettus and Esquire—whether the heir was the one and his younger brothers the latter? Compare the Pardon quoted 1216-17.

John Gower the Poet, in his will 15 Aug. 1408, leaves legacies to the office bearers at St. Mary of Overes: "Item I bequeath to each Valet within the doors of the said Priory serving the Prior and Convent 11^{s}, and to each boy 12^{d}.

Circa 1410.

The first edition of Selden's Titles was printed in 1614, and he mentions a little glossary of Nomina Graduum, a manuscript of about 200 years since, now in possession of Moreton Lambard, in which occur Garconet, a little boy; Garcon, a knave; Varleton, a groom; Varlet, a yeoman, etc. (Selden, ed. 1672, p. 688.)

1415.

Edward, Duke of York, by his will 22 Aug. 1415, "I will that my menial servants who dwelt in my household for a whole year before I went to Harfleur in company with my sovereign Lord the King be paid by my ex^{ors} their wages for the term next after my decease, that is to say, to each Esquire L^{s}, to a Vadlet xx^{s}, to a Garceon . . . .^{s}, and to a Page vj^{s} viij^{d}."

1425-6.

In 4 Henry VI. the Prior and Bursar of the Priory of Burceter accounted "et in blodeo panno empto pro Armigeris et Valectis Prioris." (Cowell, under Armigeri, quoting Ken's "Parochial Antiq.," p. 576.)

1414 to 1443.

Selden (Titles, fo. 691) says that in the Register of Wills of Archbishop Chicheley, within these dates, Milites, Armigeri, Valetti, and Garciones frequently occur, one immediately after the other.

Fortescue ("De Laudibus Legum Angliæ," 2nd edit., 1741, with notes by Selden, pp. 62, 63) has some curious notes on Valecti and its value as a title. The Patent creating Sir John Fortescue Lord Chief Justice is dated 25 Jan. 1442, hence I attach this date.

1445-6.

Statute, 23 Henry VI., directs the choice of knights of the shire. They must be either knights "ou autrement tielx notables, Esquiers, gentilhommes del nativitie des mesmes les Counties come soient ables destre chevalier et nul homme destre tiel chivalier qui estoite en le degree de Vadlet et desouth." (Selden, p. 688, Cowell, under Knights of the Shire, "quod nullus homo fit talis miles qui in gradu Valetti et inferiori existit.")

1462-3, 1482-3.

In the Statutes of Apparel, 2 Edw. IV., cap. 5, and 22 Edw. IV., cap. 1, directions as to Valetti occur.

The will, dated 12 June 1511, of Thomas Cadogan, "Valectus Coronæ." In Kelham's "Norman French Dictionary" he translates "Vadlettes del Corone" as Yeomen of the Crown. See also Statute 1627, 3 Charles I., cap. 4; also among the Muniments of Oldswinford Hospital, 10 Henry VIII. (1518), grant to "Roger Sparry, Valettus Coronæ domini regis" (Transcripts penes John Amphlett, Esq.); also in "Syllabus Vocabulorum, in Jure 1678 Anglico occurrunt," attached to Dr. Adam Littleton's Latin Dictionary (my copy is 6th edition, 1735; the 1st edition was in 1678)—"Valettus, a gentleman of the privy Chamber, also a Bencher's Clerk."

In Coke's Institutes, first published 1628, liber ii., sect. 234, as to Challenges of the array of Juries: "but if the Sheriff be a Vadelect of the Crown or other menial servant of the King"—there the challenge is good. (My copy is the 7th edition, 1670.)

We now get a most important sidelight as to the depreciated value of this title, which was originally one implying a condition of great honour.

Randle Cotgrave first published his French-English Dictionary in 1632 (my copy, greatly enlarged by James Howell, was printed in London 1650). Under "Valet," which he translates "a groome, yeoman, or household servant of the meaner sort," he further remarks: "In old time it was a more honourable title; for all young gentlemen, untill they came to be eighteen years of age, were (as at this day Batchelers in Britaine are) tearmed so, besides those that waited in the King's Chamber (and who were for the most part gentlemen), had no other title than of Valets de Chambre untill that 1515 to 1547 Francis the 1st, perceiving such as attended him to be no better than Roturiers, brought in above them another sort, and caused them to be stiled Gentilshommes de sa Chambre; presently after which the Title of Valet grew into disesteem, and is at length become opposite unto that of Gentilhomme." He then gives a list of various Valets of low degree, culminating in "Valet de Cuisine," meaning a scullion or kitchen drudge!

This quite accounts for a rapid depreciation of the title in France, which would soon penetrate our English ideas.

The accounts of the Inner Temple shew that the butlers in that establishment, vulgarly, as one would expect, called the clerks or servants of the Benchers Varlets, but I am unable to attach a date.

The danger of so short and imperfect a printed list is lest certain spellings should be arbitrarily attached to certain dates, which a much longer list of proofs would shew to be an unsafe deduction.

The title Vaslettus, Vadletus was in use in France before the Conquest, and the social custom of great households—largely consisting of young aspirants to knighthood—obtained in many countries. For our present purpose we need only instance France and Germany.

I do not know anything more fascinating than the glimpses which at rare intervals we get into the interiors and the social life of such great houses at early dates, and I feel sure the following will therefore be pleasant reading.

About 1810 the Record Commissioners employed experts to make abstracts from Archives in France which referred to English history, intending to add them to their Record Series. Want of funds prevented this, and the MSS. have since been lying unused in Fetter Lane under the reference title "Record Transcripts, 140—A. B., etc." I went through some of these years ago, and the whole have now been printed (in 1899) under the title of "A Calendar of Documents in France, illustrating the History of Great Britain and Ireland," edited by Mr. J. H. Round, who, I feel sure, has added and corrected much by personal research.

Here then is this interesting letter: The cupbearer to Hugh de Montgomery, Earl of Shrewsbury, having been enfeoffed by him in an important and beautiful Shropshire manor, writes his greetings, before 1098, to his Norman friends at the Abbey of St. Mary, La Sauve Majeure (near Bordeaux), telling them of his friendly offerings given, and yet to come, which he makes out of those good things which have come to him. And he adds the names of his family and household that the monks may remember him and them in their prayers.

It shews us that natural instincts were the same then as now. The emigrant leaves his native place and undergoes struggles, wars, and privations, but when at length peace and prosperity surround him, the love of his early home revives, and this is how he writes to his old friends.

Charter No. 1238 (A.D. 1095—1098).—Gual. dapifer and Ælicia his wife to Achelmus, Abbot of St. Mary of La Sauve Majeure, and all his congregation, gives the church of this manor, Werfeld by name, with all its appurtenances, viz., the tithe of six ploughs, and of all which is subject to tithe, and the land of four ploughs, also half a fishery in the Severn, one in Werfeld, and more if they are made there; further, yearly, a measure of wheat, until he assigns them its equivalent in land or tithe. For his son, who will be his heir after him, he gives the tithe of three mills in Werfeld, and of more if there shall be more there. His woods shall be free to the monks for all they require, and they shall grind at his mills without multure. He has begun to build at Werfeld a church in honour of St. Peter, which he gives them when it shall be completed by the help of God. Earl Hugh has confirmed this gift.—Before these witnesses: Arnulfus, his brother, and my brother Robert, Walter, my cousin by the mother's side.

He wishes to send them the names of his father, mother, and other friends. Hunfridus, father; Rogeria, mother; Adam, my son; Wido, father of my wife; Annes, her mother; Rainaldus, Unfridus, Robertus, Philippus, Hugo, Hadewisa, all joining in the gifts, specified or not specified; "Val" [sic], Gundreda, Rothais, Beatrix, Marsia, Mabilia, Avicia, Eufemia, my daughters; Gundreda Gaufridus, Osbernus, Raineln^{o}, Mabeldis, Juliana, Adelardus, Ælicia, Alpes [sic].

Arnulfus de Montgomery, Earl Hugh's brother, was slain early in 1098—before the 27th August [Charter No. 666]. The tenure was hereditary; the lands would go to the son who survived him. I do not comprehend the two words "Val" and "Alpes," and forbear from speculating.

This is a most valuable addition to the history of Shropshire. The church of Worfield still stands in its lovely valley, but, except the Domesday account, nothing was known of its early history. Even my greatly respected friend, and the prince of historians, Mr. R. W. Eyton, was obliged to say, "I have no direct notice of this church till the reign of King John, who twice presented incumbents."—("History of Shropshire," vol. iii., pp. 104—116).

SOME NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY.

John Acworth, son of the last-named John, is proved to be so by the will of his daughter Delicia, who mentions that her grandfather is buried at Lambeth (the presumption is sufficient that she meant her paternal grandfather, and that John Acworth, buried 8 April 1717, was he), and by evidence existing that her father's name was John. Law cases in which he was engaged shew that he did business in wine-importing and in underwriting insurance risks.† Two other Chancery suits in which he was involved were of some importance. The first, in 1706, is undertaken in the name of himself, of his wife Mary, and of his wife's sister Martha, to compel renewal by the Bishop of Winchester of lease of the manor of Overton. This renewal he ultimately obtained. In later years the Rectory and advowson of Wandsworth were a subject of long litigation. John's first wife Mary was the daughter of Thomas Andrew, their marriage being in April 1706. Of her family, taken from Chancery Proceedings and wills, some pedigree is shewn on the accompanying chart. She died 7 April 1713, and is buried at Wandsworth, administration of her estate being granted 2 July 1714 to her husband (P.C.C.). In 1717 John married his second wife Ann Ball, who died in 1748, and was buried at Wandsworth on 25 April, aged 70. Her husband had died before her, probably in 1744, but evidence of the exact date is missing.

PEDIGREE OF ANDREW.

Six children.

All John's children were baptized at Wandsworth, the issue by the first marriage being: Thomas Andrew, baptized 16 January 1706-7; Delicia, 5 March 1708; John, 20 October 1709; Gabriel, 29 January 1711. The issue by the second marriage were: Edmund, baptized 22 October 1718; Elizabeth, 22 October 1721;

† One of these cases is dated 1717, and states rates of insurance paid on short voyages, generally "with convoy through the Channel," but sometimes without, which may interest an underwriter of the present day. The Galley "Audenard," from Dartmouth to London without convoy, pays £10 10*s.* per cent. in December 1709, "the Channell being very full of French privateers." Rates to Spain are £7 7*s.* to £18 18*s.* per cent. Some names of firms and individuals of that day who are mentioned are: Ellins and Gotley, Brown and Tanner, William Gordon, Mr. Bowman (a goldsmith or banker).

Abraham, 10 December 1719; Mary, 22 July 1723. Of these, the first was deceased in 1728, as shewn by Chancery Proceedings. Delicia died at the age of 60, unmarried, and was buried at Wandsworth 26 May 1768, her will being in P.C.C. (224, Secker). John was, according to Manning and Bray's "Surrey," blown up in the "Dartmouth" man-of-war in 1746. His will, dated 1739, when he was purser on board the "Sea Horse," was proved by his brother Gabriel as sole executor and legatee in 1748 (P.C.C., 257, Strahan). Many years later, in 1816, a transport of the same name, "Sea-horse," was wrecked in Tramore Bay, and lost with all the officers and men of the old 59th Foot. Edmund and Mary, children by the second marriage, both probably died in infancy. Elizabeth married on 25 July 1745 at Hammersmith Chapel, by licence, F. W. Manaton, bachelor, of St. Dunstan's in the West, to whose descendants a few words may be allowed before John Acworth's two remaining sons, Gabriel, by his first wife, and Abraham, by his second, are noticed at more length.

F. W. Manaton had issue by his wife Elizabeth a son, Peirce William Manaton, who was buried at Wandsworth 12 May 1745, and a daughter Martha, who married, in 1773, Captain Cornthwaite Ommanney, R.N. Captain, afterwards Rear-Admiral, Ommanney was the father of Sir John Acworth Ommanney, C.B., known for the important part he played in the battle of Navarino, and grandfather of another gallant seaman, Admiral Sir Erasmus Ommanney, Knt., K.C.B., F.R.S., etc., who was also present at, and was the last officer surviving from the said sanguinary battle of Navarino, and who in the Franklin search expedition was himself personally the first to discover traces of the missing ships. The name, which is the subject of these notes, is still continued in families once connected with those who bore it as a surname, and in Sir Erasmus Ommanney's own family and generation it was borne by his sister Elizabeth Acworth Ommanney, who married at Calcutta, 6 June 1828, Augustus Prinsep, Esq., of the Bengal Civil Service.

Gabriel Acworth, to whom we now return, was, on the authority of his grandson Rear-Admiral H. O. Love, a purveyor to the Navy. He married, on 3 December 1751, Ann Blagrave of Balmarsh Court, Berkshire, daughter of George and Philadelphia Blagrave, and granddaughter on the mother's side of Charles Hawtrey and Philadelphia, née Mapleston. His wife was baptized 17 January 1723-4, and buried at Ruislip in 1800, aged 76. Her will, dated 9 April 1798, proved 10 February 1801, is in P.C.C. (75, Abercrombie).

Gabriel died in 1769, and was buried at Wandsworth 28 February, aged 59. His will, dated 17 January in the same year, is in P.C.C. (73, Bogg), and gave rise many years afterwards to Chancery Proceedings, and to a judgment which has since been referred to as a precedent. Much concerning him is to be seen in Manning and Bray's "Surrey," and in the books of Mr. C. T. Davis on Wandsworth, in which town he owned considerable property, as well as the rectory and advowson. He is described in his will as of Rotherhithe, where no doubt he carried on his business, and of Wandsworth. By his wife Ann he had issue: Elizabeth Rogers, buried at Wandsworth 27 September 1756; Martha, buried at Wandsworth 11 September 1759; Mary Andrew, buried at Wandsworth 18 March 1771, aged 19; Ann Blagrave, who married Harry Sedgwick; Sophia, who married Dr. E. M. Thornton; Harriet, baptized at St. Mary's, Rotherhithe, 6 April 1764, married 29 September 1785 to Captain William Love; Thomas Andrew, born 1758, buried at Wandsworth 1 May 1783, aged 25, a bachelor. Ann Sedgwick and Sophia Thornton were both living in 1798, when they were legatees of their mother. The latter is said to have had a large family, and to have migrated with her husband Dr. Thornton from Whitechapel into Gloucestershire. Harriet Love was the mother of several children, one of whom, H. O. Love, became a Captain in the Navy, retiring with the rank of Rear-Admiral, and in his latter years was a constant and always welcomed guest in the house of Sir Francis Molyneux

Garter Principal King of Arms.

Stephen Martin Leake,
Clarenceux King of Arms.

Ommanney.* He and a sister Harriet are both buried at Yarmouth, Isle of Wight. Thomas Andrew died, according to Manning and Bray, from the consequences of a fall. As he was an only son and unmarried, Gabriel's brother Abraham remained now the sole representative left to continue the male line of their branch of the Acworth family.

Abraham Acworth, the younger brother of Gabriel, was in the Exchequer Office, and the promotions he obtained in it may be seen recorded in the pages of the "Gentleman's Magazine." He married, 30 April 1745, Margaretta Mabella, daughter of Anthony Rodney Buckeridge, deceased, and Ann his wife, who at the time of the marriage had become Ann Ball. Abraham Acworth died 4 April 1781, and was buried on 14 April in Westminster Abbey, being described at the time as of Smith Street, Westminster; his wife Mabella, who died 15 April 1794, was also buried there. Abraham's will was proved 19 April 1781 by his widow, and administration of her estate was granted 14 May 1794 to their only surviving son Buckeridge Ball Acworth. Their other issue were: Abraham Holmes, born 20 December 1751, baptized at St. John the Evangelist 16 January 1752, died 28 November 1773, buried 6 December following in Westminster Abbey; Charles Lewis, buried at Wandsworth 29 July 1750.

On 7 July 1748 Abraham took out a grant of arms for all descendants of his father John Acworth, but the grant became extinct in 1818 by the death of his son Buckeridge Ball. The charges on the shield are evidently intended to bear some outward resemblance to the quarterings shewn at Luton, Bedfordshire, of date 1513, but sadly garbled; and the indication thrown in of bastardy on a composition that is also intentionally deprived of any inner meaning is needless and absurd. But Abraham was unaware of the grounds on which he might with propriety have used the much older griffin device; he states in fact that he has lost trace of his descent, though his family have for long used arms. Portraits in oils by Hudson of Abraham and his wife Mabella, in the frills and furbelows of the period, are in the possession of Admiral Ommanney, bequeathed to him in 1881 by Miss Harriet Love, sister of Admiral Love before mentioned; and Sir Erasmus has as well a portrait of Sir Jacob Acworth, who, being on another line of descent of the family, will be noticed later.

Of this branch it remains only to add a few words concerning Buckeridge Ball Acworth, with whose death it ended in the male line. Buckeridge Ball Acworth died 15 August 1818, and was buried 26 August in Westminster Abbey. His age at the time was stated to be 71 years, and therefore he must have been born in 1746 or 1747. In his will (P.C.C., 351, Creswell), proved 1818 by his cousin Francis Molyneux Ommanney (afterwards Sir Francis) and his friend Andrew Edge, he leaves many valuable legacies to hospitals. The will seems to shew that he was a bachelor: such indeed he was, and thereby hangs a tale. Among many other legatees in the will the name Dupuy occurs often. The family of Dupuy is another of those which has kept alive among its own members the name of Acworth till the present time, and the reason for it in their case makes a story which is almost romantic. In early life Acworth had set his affections on a lady who preferred and married another, and the disappointment he suffered appears to have prevented his thinking of marrying ever after. His successful rival, P. S. Dupuy, was of the India House, and from his grandson Mr. Henry Acworth Dupuy, now living, the writer has learned the few particulars here set down. After the marriage of Mr. Dupuy to the lady of his choice, Acworth continued a friendship to her and to him, and in due time stood godfather to some of their children, remembering them also in his will. Whether this incident in his career, and possible cause of the extinction of the line of Westminster Acworths, was worth recalling is perhaps doubtful, and there is at least nothing more concerning him of sufficient interest to notice.

* Information supplied by the kindness of Sir Erasmus Ommanney, his son.

Our narrative now goes back to William, the younger brother of Allyn Acworth, and supposed progenitor of the line still existing, as Allyn was of that we have just seen ended.

Of the many names in Pepys' immortal "Diary" of persons hitherto unidentified, one of the most frequently recurring is that of "Mr. Ackworth." The Christian name is nowhere given, but by collating the "Diary" with the Calendars of State Papers (Domestic) it will be seen that the allusions are to William Acworth, Storekeeper at Woolwich, who was the third son of John Acworth and his successor in that office. William's name begins to appear in the Calendars in 1636, and in 1637 he is already spoken of as Storekeeper; but at that time he can only have held an acting appointment, for his father then was still alive, and there is positive evidence that the son was not confirmed in the office till 1638 (or 1639). From the Calendars is chiefly derived what is known of William's public career, on which interesting side-lights are thrown by entries in the "Diary;" but before dealing with these sources of information something must be said of his private life. In or before 1638 William Acworth married Avice Cole, second daughter and coheir of Thomas Cole alias Coole and of Avice Battle alias Cole his wife. The evidence of the marriage is in Fine Roll, 13 Charles I., Part 2, No. 22, which shews also that Avice's elder sister Katharine had married Peter Pett, of whom more hereafter.

William was probably born in 1615, and his wife is shewn to have been born 1616. She died in 1643, and Lysons's "Environs of London" (1796) states that she was buried at Woolwich. William married secondly Elizabeth Munday, widow of William Munday and daughter of Peter Bradshaw. Elizabeth died in 1646, when administration of her estate was granted to her husband. There were no children of this marriage. Bradshaw, like several others in Acworth connection, is a name that recurs from earlier times in Bedfordshire, a Thomas Bradshaw having been instituted in 1561 to Holcot Rectory, with George Acworth, D.C.L., and Richard Charnock as sureties; and the William Bradshaw who, with William Acworth, witnesses in 1646 the will of Francis Sheldon, is probably the same William who is shewn on the accompanying Bradshaw Pedigree. Acworth married thirdly Elizabeth, daughter of (Sir ?) William Smith of East Greenwich, Serjeant-at-Law, and of Alice* his wife, who was a sister of Bishop Duppa. Acworth's third wife survived him, and married again to Robert Foley of Stourbridge. It is curious that Peter Pett, who married a sister of Acworth's first wife, married secondly Mary, a sister of his third wife (see pedigree, p. 216); and she, as well as her husband, will reappear in these notes.

Acworth had issue, proved on the evidence of State Papers (Domestic), a son William by his first wife; and a Henry Acworth of the Chatham yard, from whom there is a letter in 1657, can only have been another son of theirs. Thomas and John are other sons—on evidence sufficient, but not amounting to proof. By his third wife there is proof that William had a daughter Mary in the will of Robert Foley, proved 1675 (P.C.C., 138, Bunce); and Brian Acworth, a son, is legatee of Bishop Duppa in 1661 (P.C.C., 73, Laud). William Acworth died intestate. His relict's will has not been found, and the Woolwich Parish Registers begin too late to give the baptisms of any of his issue, but Francis, Robert, and Edward are believed to be brothers of Brian and Mary.

* After Smith's death she married again to John Bettenham of Pluckley, Kent, and was living in 1647. Can any reader kindly give the reference to her will or to that of her sister Mrs. Salter?

Composed in sufferings and in joy sedate,
Good without noise; in virtue truly great:
Just in his word, in every thought sincere,
He knew no wish, but what the world might hear:
Blest with each science that adorns the mind;
Lover of peace, and a friend of human kind.

Go live! for heav'n's eternal year is thine,
Go, and exalt thy moral to divine.
Yet take these tears, mortality's relief,
And, till we share thy joys, forgive our grief.

(1) Louis Dutens was Honorary Librarian to the Royal Institution between 1804-9, and there may still be found within the blank pages of a book ("Temporum Chronologia"—a small folio published at Rochelle in 1600) presented by him, a family pedigree drawn up by himself,—a fact which he is at the pains of recording in his will. While omitting much information of which he cannot fail to have been possessed, he professes to carry the pedigree four generations farther back to one Jean Dutemps, or "Joannes Temporarius," of Blois, who flourished from 1500 to 1600, and was a fellow-labourer with Calvin. Amongst the Refugees at Rotterdam was a Du Tens from Blois. A mezzotint portrait of Louis Dutens by Fisher was published 1 Jan. 1777.

(2) Amongst his publications is found in 1819 "Mémoire sur les travaux publics de l'Angleterre." In "Biographe Universelle" (tome xii., 138) he is called Joseph Michel, but in his aunt's will of 1788 appears as Joseph Francis.

(3) Peter Dutens, in his will of 1761, names besides others his niece Mary Guilterm, and brother-in-law Captain Moses Charlotte. He had, if one may accept the statements made by Louis Dutens in his "Mémoires d'un Voyageur," at the date of his nephew's joining him, acquired a fortune of £75,000, had married an Irishwoman, and had six children of ages ranging between fifteen and two.

(4) They held the patronage of the living of Runwell, Essex, as well as of Baddow.

(5) If the statement in "Landed Gentry" that this lady married Richard Magenis, M.P., be correct, this must have been a first marriage.

FOULLERTOUN CHARTER.*

The following Charter is a copy taken from a transcription made by Lord Haddington, either from the original Charter or the now lost Rolls of the Great Seal Register.

Lord Haddington was born towards the end of the sixteenth century. He became one of the Senators of the College of Justice, and for some time held the appointment of Clerk Registrar. A very valuable collection of old Charters was made by him, and others he borrowed and copied. These manuscripts are now preserved in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh.

Reviews.

The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography. Vol. XII., No. 4. April 1905. Virginia Historical Society, Richmond, U.S.A.

THIS No. completes the Twelfth Volume, and is issued with full title and an ample index. The first article gives a good account of the early westward movement of Virginia in securing the Indians from extermination at the hands of the "Five Nations," whose territory bordered on Lake Erie and Lake Ontario; and a treaty was arranged at Albany in 1722 at which all the Indian tribes were represented, and a neutral ground was also by the Council chosen where both the Southern and Northern Indians could use it as a hunting-ground. It was also enacted that no one could take more than a thousand acres. About this time a colony of Germans, numbering seventeen heads of families, came as emigrants to Virginia, but they got into trouble with the Governor on account of money advanced them on their entry into the district, and finally they removed forty miles westward and built in 1740 Hebron Church, in Madison County. Their descendants constitute now one of the most important elements of population in the County.

Among other articles in the No. are two on Virginia in 1639, and Virginia "Gleanings in England," giving accounts of various Englishmen's wills who had left property there from 1615 to 1655. In "Notes and Queries" there are portraits given of Thomas and Susanna Davis and a sister-in-law, Mary Elizabeth Carter, of Kentucky; and in Genealogy there is a full account of the Brent family of Cossington, Somerset, and a photo given of St. Mary's Church and Manor House, Cossington; also the Bruce genealogy is continued. Altogether the No. is interesting.

The Journal of the Ex Libris Society. Vol. XV., Parts 2 and 3, for February and March. London : A. and C. Black, Soho Square, W.

THIS double Part is amply illustrated by bookplates, one of "Frank Connell, 1905," being formed like many Irish plates of books, grouped round his initials, with the busy bee as a crest; there is also a Price-Cleveland plate given from the Franks' collection; and one of James Pierot, whose family history narrates that on the night of St. Bartholomew Jacques Pierot and nineteen others were condemned to La Bastille and walled up for twenty-one days without food or water, at the end of which time Pierot was found to be the only one alive. He was liberated on account of the miracle and helped away from France. This marvellous sustaining power was due to a hen who daily laid an egg in the recess of the small window of the cell. The family went to America in 1687, but afterwards located in Bermuda, and James Pierot became a silversmith. This bookplate has for the crest a hen sitting on its nest, with the motto "Fama Proclamat Honorem," and with the signature given as James Pérot. The arms for identification run up to No. 576.

There are two Donegall arms given as well as the bookplates of James Paine, the architect between 1725 and 1789; and four excellent designs by F. G. House, one with an Arabic inscription.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record. Vol. XXXVI., No. 2. April 1905. Society's Office: 226 West 58th Street, New York, U.S.A.

THIS Part commences with a biographical notice of the late Palma di Cesnola, the Director of the Metropolitan Museum of New York. Some particulars are given of his excavations in Cyprus and the results therefrom, which now form what is known as the Cesnola collection in the Metropolitan Museum.

It may be of interest to quote some of the conclusions, as summarized by distinguished scholars, concerning this collection:—firstly, it is claimed that it contributes to modern knowledge a wider field of art; secondly, it forms a most complete illustration of the history of ancient art and civilization; thirdly, it contains the first known works of the Phœnician art and introduces the Phœnicians as teachers of the Etruscans; and lastly, it is the key of the origin and development of Greek civilization.

The other items consist mainly of American genealogies, which make the Part interesting.

Fenland Notes and Queries. Vol. VI., Part 65. April 1905. Peterborough: George C. Caster, Market Place.

AMONG the contributions in this No. we notice particularly Papers on the Liberty of Peterborough, and a collection of notices in Chronicon Angliæ Petriburgense about Spalding Priory. Also extracts of the following early Soham Wills are given:—John Leyr. 1469; John Wylkyn, 1471; John Michell, 1498; Richard Sokborne, 1502; Elizabeth Wheler, 1502; and Edward Bestenay, 1540. There is an illustration of Soham Church, reproduced from an old coloured print.

A Catalogue of Old and Rare British and American Bookplates (Ex Libris). London : Chas. A. Massey, 136 Upper Tulse Hill, S.W.

To all interested in Ex Libris collections the possession of this catalogue will be of value as a record, containing particulars of 2,449 bookplates arranged in alphabetical order, with illustrations of various styles. These comprise many heraldic bookplates from the seventeenth century upwards.

Pedigree of Acworth of Bedfordshire, etc.*

SOME NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY.

Reverting to the Calendars of State Papers (Domestic), the first occurrence therein of William's name is in a letter signed by William Acworth and Francis Sheldon, and dated 27 May 1636, concerning a non-delivery of tree-nails to Chatham, "the reason thereof being that Captain Pett would not suffer them so to do." This Sheldon is probably the same whose will, 1646 (P.C.C., 61, Fines), is witnessed by William Acworth and William Bradshaw. In 1659 the will of Sheldon's widow Elizabeth is witnessed by William Acworth and John Bethell (P.C.C., 207, Fell), and another Sheldon (William) is co-signatory with Acworth to many official letters in and after 1653. Charles Sheldon is a legatee in 1661 of Brian Duppa, Bishop of Winchester, and there is evidence the family was closely connected with those of Duppa, Salter, and probably Acworth. The next mention of William Acworth in the Calendars is on 17 June 1637, when the Lords of the Admiralty order him to resign his habitation at Deptford to Peter Pett the elder, and remove to "the house lately enlarged for his accommodation at Woolwich, where, by his place of storekeeper," they say he ought to reside. Many references scattered through the Calendars, and relating to stores and accounts, need no mention here, but others which read curiously at the present day, and in which Acworth's name occurs, may be worth recalling. The following extracts are from letters from him to the Navy Commissioners :—

25 February 1664-5. "Mr. Morison refuses to deliver the remainder of the 200 lasts of tar contracted for by Mr. Cutler until he has made sure of his money."

30 May 1665. "The 300 soldiers ordered for that ship (the 'Royal Katherine') refused at Greenwich to come on board until their arrears, amounting to 23/4 a man, were paid. The arrears were promised at Woolwich, but only 120 came on board. Many are gone away."

23 February 1669. "I send an account of provisions issued from the stores for making fortifications against the approach of the Dutch."

On 1 August 1671 a letter appears from Jonas Shish to William Acworth, requesting him to "furnish the 'Frances' and 'Fountain' fireships with shavings and rosin."

On 6 February 1667 a receipt is signed by William Acworth and William Sheldon for two masts, 101½ and 100 feet long, "sent from New England as a present to his Majesty from the Colony of Massachusetts;" and on 21 January 1670 the same signatories write to the Navy Commissioners, comparing the merits of these masts with others—"they being present the shipwright and the late Christopher Pett pitched on one 100 ft. by 38 in. and one 99 ft. by 36 in., the proportions of diameter to length being better."

On 27 July 1658 William Acworth was suspended from his office in consequence of embezzlements, of which it appears his son William was guilty, and was only reinstated on 5 October following, after having paid £80 for the stores taken, and on giving a bond in £1500 for the faithful discharge of that office. The boy, though probably his eldest son, must have been very young, and the morals of the period were lax regarding public property throughout the whole dockyard service—so, at least, says Pepys—but would that the genealogist who relates all he knows had never such an incident as this to record! The occurrence is the more to be regretted, because the father was himself some years later the subject of a similar accusation. Shortly after this time the allusions made by Pepys in his "Diary" to

Mr. Ackworth begin, and some of them are directly connected with the subject of the charges against him. Readers of Pepys' work will form their own opinions whether he was guilty; but it may be pointed out that the Diarist was always hasty in his judgments, was often changeable, and that Acworth won the action he brought for defamation of character, and damages against his traducer.

Before going more fully into this matter reference must be made to the earlier mentions of him by Pepys. The quotations given here are as they appear in the complete edition of the "Diary" by H. B. Wheatley, F.S.A.:—

18 May 1660. "At our landing" [at the Hague—he is in Holland with Pett and others] "met .... went along with Commissioner Pett, Mr. Ackworth, and Mr. Dawes, his friends, to the Princess Dowager's house again, where we sat late. And among other mirth Mr. Ackworth vyed wives, each endeavouring to set his own wife out to the best advantage, he having as they said an extraordinary handsome wife."

The Commissioner Pett here is the same Peter Pett who had married a sister of Acworth's first wife. The respective wives of Acworth and Pett "vyed" are again sisters, Elizabeth and Mary, daughters of William Smith, Serjeant-at-Law. Elizabeth is Acworth's third wife, and Mary is Pett's second. The first wife of Pett died in 1651. His present wife Mary died 28 January 1665. In 1667 Pett was arrested on a warrant dated 16 June and sent to the Tower, and there is no doubt that the "sister Mrs. Acworth" for whom leave was asked to visit and confer with him there was his sister-in-law Elizabeth, wife of William Acworth (see State Papers, Domestic, 8 and 11 July 1667). What Acworth's business precisely with Pepys in Holland was at the time of the foregoing extract is not known, but the tradition has come down in the family that its forbears took some small part in the Stuart restoration, and Pepys was instrumental in bringing this about. Subsequent entries in the "Diary" record many visits to Pett and Acworth, with candid and curious expressions of opinion on them and their surroundings, and especially on their wives.

Pepys' remarks on Mrs. Acworth are frequent, and on one occasion he says: "Above all things we did see her Rocke, which is one of the finest things done by a woman that ever I saw. I must have my wife to see it .... So to the Dock again and took in Mrs. Ackworth and another gentlewoman and carried them to London, and at the Globe Tavern in Eastcheap did give them a glass of wine and so parted." Interspersed with such jottings are notes on matters of business. Pepys has on 11 July 1662 "viewed well all the houses and stores there" [at Woolwich], "which lie in very great confusion for want of storehouses, and then to Mr. Ackworth's and Sheldon's to view their books, which we found not to answer the King's service and security at all as to the Stores." On 23 July 1663 he writes: "I staid also at Mr. Ackworth's desire at dinner with him and his wife, and there was a simple fellow, a gentleman I believe of the Court, their kinsman, that threatened me I could have little discourse or begin acquaintance with Ackworth's wife."

On 22 April 1664 Pepys walks from Greenwich to Woolwich, staying several times, so he says, to listen to the nightingales! "And on floate I discovered a plain cheat, which in time I shall publish, of Mr. Ackworth's." This is the first of the entries in the "Diary" charging Acworth with dishonesty, and here it is necessary to turn to other sources of information. On 18 April, or four days previous to the entry last quoted, a letter (State Papers, Domestic) from Jo. Falkener to Sam. Pepys says, "Mr. Acworth cannot supply deals for the ropeyard, having only eight score; 800 more will be wanting." The letter may explain the entry, but the formal accusation against Acworth was not made till nearly three years afterwards, in February 1667; and, if Pepys discovered real evidence that he had embezzled some of the deals, it is strange the theft was not brought home to him. The particulars of the case against him are not given in any records now existing, but Coram Rege Roll (Trinity, 19 Charles II., London, 1396) shews that Francis Clayford stated on 19 February of that year (1667), before John Mynes, Knt., William Batten, Knt., and Samuel Pepys, Esq., Navy

Commissioners, that William Acworth, Storekeeper at Woolwich, had converted deals and rails to his own use ; and that he repeated the accusation on the last day of the same month before other witnesses : that thereupon Acworth brought an action against Clayford for defamation of character, claiming £500 damages ; and that the case was ordered to be tried with a jury. Francis Woodward acted as attorney for Acworth and Richard Somer for Clayford, and letters in the Calendars of State Papers (Domestic) shew that Charles Porter, afterwards Sir Charles, of the Middle Temple, was employed by Acworth as counsel. The counsel employed by the Commissioners—for no doubt Clayford was only put forward as mouthpiece—was the Attorney-General of that day, Sir Geoffrey Palmer, Bart., whom Pepys tells us he consulted with "about our business with Ackworth" on 17 August 1668 ; and again on 28 August, when he writes, "most troublesome and perplexed by the counter swearing of the witnesses one against the other."

Though commenced in 1667, the action was not decided till the following year. On 21 November 1668 Clerke, writing to the Navy Commissioners, desires "that a valuation may be made of the goods taken by Mr. Acworth out of the stores, with the names of the parties who will attest it, and that all the witnesses may be ready by Wednesday sevennight." On 2 December 1668 the following entry is made by Pepys in his "Diary": "To-day I hear that Mr. Ackworth's cause went for him at Guildhall* against his accusers, which I am well enough pleased with." So ended this incident in his career, and, with but one more entry, allusions to Acworth thenceforth cease in the "Diary." On 16 March 1668-9 Pepys writes: "But my business was to speak with Ackworth about some old things and passages in the Navy, for my information therein, in order to my great business now of stating the history of the Navy."

In the Calendars are but few more references to Acworth the Storekeeper, and these chiefly concern complaints against him made to the Navy Board of no importance, but which read very curious. Cooke's and Awdry's cattle have trespassed and damaged his fences and land, and he exacts compensation. The Board write him on 7 January 1671 that, if he will not give Cooke satisfaction, or refer the matter to arbitration, "they will move his Royal Highness to take off the protection he is under by his place, and give the petitioner (Cooke) leave to take the benefit of the law against him." What the end was with Cooke does not appear, but Awdry's case was evidently submitted to arbitration, and decided in Acworth's favour, for, on 6 July 1672, his widow writes the Board complaining that Awdry refuses to pay the sum awarded.

Acworth must have died at the end of 1671, and administration of his estate is granted 31 January 1672 (P.C.C.) to his relict Elizabeth. He was buried at Woolwich, where, according to Lysons's "Environs of London," published in 1796, a monument was then still existing to mark his grave and that of his first wife. His relict Elizabeth has not been traced after 1675, when she was legatee of her second husband Robert Foley (P.C.C., 138, Bunce). If her will could be found it would most likely give proof of the next step on this Pedigree, where at present there is only presumption.

Of William and Henry, sons of Acworth by his first wife, no more is known than already stated, except that administration of William's estate was granted to the father in November 1668 (P.C.C.). The other sons of this marriage, Thomas and John, will be noticed next. Of the children by the third marriage, Brian and Mary disappear from sight. The brothers of these will be noticed in their place, and from one of them the present family is descended.

Thomas Acworth was born in 1640 or 1641 : so much is clear from the tablet which still exists at Oxford to his memory, and which gives his age. Though positive proof of parentage is missing, it may be confidently asserted that he was the son of William, Storekeeper at Woolwich, from many indications, and from the fact that he devises by will landed property which his father had bought. This property consisted of chalk cliffs, meadows, etc., in Greenwich and Charlton, and had been in the family of his father's third wife till William purchased it to put an end to long-standing disputes and law-suits. The purchase was in 1658, and is shewn on Close Roll 4015.

Thomas was the only one of William's sons whose career was not connected with the dockyards or ship-building. He went into the Church, beginning his college life at Magdalen Hall, Oxford, where he matriculated 8 December 1658. He was B.A. from Christchurch 22 November 1662, M.A. 28 June 1665, B.D. 14 July 1683. In 1682 he was instituted to the Vicarage of Pyrton, with which incumbency he also held that of Shirburn. Acworth married twice, his first wife being Susan, daughter of Francis Gooddiar, Rector of Courtenhall; she died in child-birth, and was buried at Pyrton 29 July 1685, where there is a tablet with long inscription to her memory. His second wife was Mary Sudwell, who also died before him, and was buried at Oxford 11 September 1714. By Mary he had issue a son Thomas (born 1690 or December 1689), who matriculated at Christchurch 11 December 1705, aged 15, was B.A. from Corpus 14 October 1709, and died 11 March 1709-10. Acworth himself died 12 October 1719. His age is stated on the tablet, before mentioned, at St. Mary's, Oxford, to have been 78, and this tablet records also the burials of his second wife and son. He appears by his will, dated 1717, to have lived a very sad and solitary existence after their deaths, and he directs that he "be buried very privately, without any invitation of funeral guests except .... that the holders of my pall be Dr. Woodward, etc. .... if I die in Kent that I be buried privately at Woolwich .... I desire there be no inscription over my grave nor any monument, I being unworthy of any remembrance of me."

In 1702 Acworth was deprived as a non-juror, and at his petition William Howell was appointed Vicar of Pyrton in his place. From this time nothing more is heard of him till his death. If the intention was that he should one day return to the living it was never carried out, but an entry of 22 January 1713 in Hearne (himself a non-juror) shews that the belief current at the time was that Howell was only keeping the place warm for him: "On Wednesday last died Mr. William Howell, A.M. .... and had a parsonage (Pyrton). But I suppose he paid considerably out of the parsonage to Mr. Acworth, formerly student (Fellow) of Christchurch, who left the said parsonage on account of his refusing to take the abjuration oath." From information kindly given by the present Incumbent it is clear that Acworth held also the living of Shirburn while he was Vicar of Pyrton, and he leaves a small bequest to the poor of both parishes in his will. To more that is known of him through the kindness of his present successors in both parishes, space forbids further reference here.

John is mentioned in the will of Thomas Acworth as his brother, deceased, and from the age given on his marriage licence in 1668 he must have been born in 1640 or 1641; indeed, it is likely he was a twin brother of Thomas. He is no doubt the same John Acworth who was recommended on 18 October 1667 by Christopher Pett, as "an able shipwright and artist," for the post of his assistant (State Papers, Domestic), and who in 1678 witnesses the will of Philip White of Chatham (Cons. Rochester). He married, by licence of 4 March 1667-8, Sarah Spreever, widow, he 27, she 24, both of Woolwich, and by her he had a numerous family, whose baptisms and burials are found at Woolwich and Rochester. He died himself in 1690, and was buried on 7 August at Woolwich, administration of his estate being granted (Cons. Rochester) to his relict Sarah on 6 September. His widow long survived him, her will, dated 1711, being proved 1723 (Arch. Rochester). Sarah was perhaps the daughter of a Sara Boyce, administration of whose estate is granted (Cons. Rochester) in 1695 to Sarah Acworth her daughter, and who was herself probably the relict of Thomas Boyce of Woolwich, shipwright

(will proved 1672, Cons. Rochester). But doubt exists as to this parentage, because two contemporary Acworths had each married a wife also named Sarah, and one of these wives was certainly living in 1695, and possibly both were. Sarah Acworth of St. Margaret's, Rochester, as the relict of John must be described, was with her daughter witness in 1720 (Arch. Rochester) to the will of Valentine Cockling, gent. Of the numerous issue of John and Sarah four died in infancy, and need not be mentioned. A daughter Avice married before 1711 . . . . Kestell, who died before 1717, his widow surviving him till 1742, or after, but being deceased in 1749. Another daughter, Sarah, married William Helby, both being still living in 1742. A son John, born 7 June 1672, baptized 20 June at Woolwich, was a naval officer, as appears by his will proved 1696 (Cons. Rochester). Another son, William, baptized 5 April 1674 at St. Margaret's, Rochester, was buried at Gillingham, Kent, 20 December 1711, aged 37, leaving two daughters, and a son who died unmarried. The only other son who needs notice will require a separate paragraph.

BOUSFIELD SWAN LOMBARD

Bookplate of the Rev. B. L. Lombard.

The following letter to the Editor from GEORGE GRAZEBROOK, Esq., F.S.A., accompanies the presentation to the "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica" of the above Plate:—

DEAR SIR,

On seeing proof of the above Plate it occurred to me that it might appear in and adorn the pages of your Journal. There is something quite original and fascinating in the design, and the drawing is exquisite—such life and movement!—a real knight, iron-clad, passes across; his sturdy horse has a great weight to carry—see the drawing of the hind legs—and is full of spirit for his work—see the ambling fore legs!

The textures throughout are excellent: the armour, the housing, the panache of feathers, the grandly handled tail (which comes through a hole, as you see it in old tricks, and with no ugly stump visible).

The eagle above full of suggestion—flying for the prey, eager to overcome, thus corresponding with the motto and with Browning's verse below. But what delights me most is the execution, ragged, fierce, determined! The spirited artist conveys all this and expresses it with quite wonderful skill!

It is the work of Miss MARY C. LAWSON of Clent Vicarage, near Stourbridge, and I feel quite sure that we shall see some splendid Bookplates from her easel, and probably more ambitious engravings too, as an artist with such poetic fancy, and so ready a graver to put it into being, cannot be restricted to one narrow field!—but I hope we may first have many such Plates as this, brimful of suggestion and yet all within so small a compass—the perfect ideal of what an Ex-Libris should be!

I am, Dear Sir, Yours faithfully,

18 Aug. 1905. GEO. GRAZEBROOK, F.S.A.

Hordle Old Churchyard, Hants.*

The old Parish Church of Hordle in Hampshire was on the top of a cliff, and three or four hundred yards from the present beach. Warner, in his "Topographical Remarks on the South-Western Parts of Hampshire" (vol. ii., p. 33), says Hordle Church was standing when Domesday was made. Mr. John R. Wise, however, in his interesting account of the History and Scenery of the New Forest, says this is a mistake, the Church having been built soon after Domesday, as we know from some grants of Baldwin de Redvers (died 1155).

Formerly all the northern part of Hordle parish, including the manor of Arnewood, was afforested, and was almost without population, which centered round the old Church in the south. Later the considerable industry of salt making (Hordle and Lymington salt-pans are said to have supplied at one time more than half the salt used in England) increased the population along the sea-board. But the development of the Cheshire salt mines which killed this industry, and the progress of enclosure of common lands, combined at the beginning of the nineteenth century to increase the population in the north of the parish and diminish that in the south.† A more central position for the Church was then felt to be necessary. The old Church was pulled down in 1830 and the materials were partly used for the construction of a new church, which in turn gave place to the present edifice, completed in 1872, on the initiative of and mostly at the expense of Mr. F. P. Kennard.

The Rev. E. P. Boys-Smith, the present Vicar, who has afforded me every assistance, has in his possession a copy of a drawing of the old Church, made before and perhaps in contemplation of its demolition, drawings of some internal details, and also a sketch of a Norman arch over the doorway in the north chancel. No trace of the latter is known to exist.

The old Church was of course in former times more conveniently placed, but ceased to be so for the reasons given above, and on account of the land lying to the south of it having been swallowed up by the sea. It is in fact traditionally stated that it used to form the centre of Hordle. The old road to Hurst may still be traced running over the cliff edge below the churchyard and out to sea; and it has been held that the shingle banks, now two or three miles from the shore, belong to Hordle, the question having been raised concerning bodies washed up there. Hordle still had a continuous stretch of beach from Beckton to Hurst at the close of the eighteenth century; and Milford was till then or later an inland parish entirely.

The old Church on the cliff was cruciform in shape, and the foundations are still clearly visible. The graveyard surrounding it has been little used since the new churchyard was opened. Some of the monuments are overgrown with grass, and many have suffered owing to the exposed position of the graveyard and its proximity to the sea. The cliff is rapidly crumbling away, and it would seem to be only a matter of time ere the site of this old church and graveyard are lost in the sea. In these circumstances it has been thought well to preserve some record of the monumental inscriptions.

[Fourth Series, Vol. I., pp. 190, 191.]

CREST.—An elephant statant [reference books say "passant or"], being the Crest of Cobb of Adderbury, co. Oxford.

The key to the shield of six quarterings seems to be the Harleian Visitations of "Oxfordshire," pp. 320, 321, and that of "Norfolk," p. 300. Quarterings: 1 and 4, Sable, a chevron between three fishes naiant argent, a chief or, COBB of Adderbury. The fishes seem to have been dolphins naiant embowed, at any rate at a later date, though a Cobb both of co. Oxford and Norfolk bore a fish naiant in base. 2, A fess between three birds volant, and on p. 191, A fess gules between three birds volant sable, impaled with Cobb and called RYVE; in Oxford Visitation. Argent, a fess gules between three ravens "segreant" sable, and no name. "Segreant" is an heraldic term not often used with birds, which I suppose implies striking at their prey, but as I am unable to find an engraved copy of this shield it will have to remain an open question. Now, the marshalling of this coat and the above-named RYVE prove it to be the coat of .... dau. and heire of .... RYVETT, who married Geoffrey Cobb of Sendringham [sic], the first heiress marriage in the Oxford and Norfolk Visitations; this coat is an addition to our reference books, as it appears in none. 3, Sable, three pitchers with handles argent, BUTLER. The son of Geoffrey—William—married Margarett, dau. and heir of Sir Jo. le Butler. This represents 3, Blank or illegible, but on p. 191, COBB, impaling Sable, three flagons argent (overwritten COBB and LE .... TLER). 4, (Argent,) a fess between six fleurs-de-lys (gules), GEYTON. William Cobb, son of the last William, married as his second wife .... [Agnes], dau. and heir of .... [Raff] Geyton of Norfolk. The Gaytons seem to have borne also, and that earlier, A fess between three fleurs-de-lys gules, which occurs second line on p. 191. 5, A cross bottony, and fourth line, p. 191, A cross bottony between four .... or; this in Oxford Visitation is, Azure, a cross patée fleurie between four estoiles or, (?) STAVLING. Thomas Cobb, grandson of the last William and Agnes Geyton, married Margaret, dau. and sole heir of .... Stavling of Adderholt in Wiltshire. I can find no family of Stavling, nor Adderholt in Wiltshire; there is an Alderholt in Dorset. The nearest coat to it in Papworth is Sterling.

On p. 191, lines 4 and 5, Cobb, impaling Quarterly, ... in each quarter a stag statant; this is, Quarterly or and azure four roebucks statant counterchanged, LLOYD. Sir William Cobb, Knt., 1634, married Susan, dau. of Noah Lloyd of co. Gloucester. Line 6, Cobb, impaling Argent, two bars sable (overwritten COBB .... ON), BRERETON. The Oxford Visitation begins the Cobb pedigree with William Cobb of Sendringham [sic] in co. Norfolk, gent.; lived 17 R. II. (1394); married .... dau. of .... Brereton; as yet I have not been able to trace her in other pedigrees.

Last line, p. 190, A bend wavy, in chief three crescents ermine, and nine and ten lines on p. 191, Azure, a bend wavy or, in chief three crescents ermine (overwritten WM. COBB and WILDE); this must be intended for WILDE, as the pedigree says William Cobb, son of the last Thomas, married Alice, dau. of Ottwell Wylde of Oldham, Lancashire; but the true Wilde has a "fess," not a "bend," and I can find no reference to the Lancashire family shewing they bore a variation; heraldically it is not probable, unless there was a chief, and I can but conclude that it is a wrong blazon.

Inscriptions on Gravestones in the Burial-ground at the Dell Farm, Painswick, Gloucestershire.

The stones are from the local quarries, and are all laid flat and the full size of the graves. About one hundred were interred in this ground, commencing in 1657. The lettering has disappeared owing to the action of the weather on the stone. These inscriptions are from a copy made about 1854 by Mr. William Atkins, who was one of the last of the Society of Friends living in Painswick.

On a brass plate affixed to the slab forming entrance to graveyard is:—

DOUGLAS, DUKE OF DOVER.*

James Douglas, 2nd Duke of Queensberry, for many and distinguished services, culminating in the Act of Union between England and Scotland, was on 26 May 1708 created, by Queen Anne, a Peer of Great Britain with the titles of Baron Rippon, Marquis of Beverly, and Duke of Dover, which honours were to descend to the Earl of Solloway his second son. This limitation was so worded because, besides an infant long since dead, the Duke then had a surviving son James (non compos mentis), and Charles, thus described as the second son, who had been created Earl of Solloway, Viscount Tibers, etc., in 1707, when he was only nine years of age. The first, and as we shall see the only, Duke of Dover died 6 July 1711, and was succeeded as 3rd Duke of Queensberry, etc., by his second son Charles aforesaid, who was born 24 November 1698; but when he came of age and sought to take his seat as Duke of Dover, the House of Lords declared that the Articles of Union restrained the King (George I.) from conferring an English Peerage on a Scotch Peer! This Bookplate was therefore engraved between 26 May 1708 and 6 July 1711.

BOOKPLATE OF THE LATE MR. JOSEPH FOSTER, HON. M.A. OXON.

(From the Collection of W. Bruce Bannerman, Esq., F.S.A.)

Obituary.

MR. JOSEPH FOSTER.

THE death took place on Saturday morning, 29th July, at his residence, 21 Boundary Road, Finchley Road, N.W., of Mr. JOSEPH FOSTER, Hon. M.A. Oxon, the antiquary and genealogist.

The family was originally seated at Cold Hesledon and Hawthorne, on the east coast of the Palatinate, but Mr. Foster was born in Sunderland in 1844. He was a nephew of the late Mr. Birket Foster, the artist. Educated in ordinary private schools in the neighbouring towns of North Shields, Sunderland, and Newcastle-on-Tyne, he inherited his genealogical faculty from his grandfather, Myles Birket Foster, and completed, as early as his eighteenth year, his first genealogical brochure, entitled "The Pedigree of the Fosters of Cold Hesledon in co. Durham." After editing four volumes of Lancashire and Yorkshire pedigrees, he transcribed the admission registers of the four Inns of Court, a herculean task, extending over several years. The acquisition of the register of our oldest University, coupled with those of the Inns of Court, with which they dovetail, illustrating and annotating each other, materially strengthened Mr. Foster's position; but still before he could hope to grapple effectually with so arduous a task as the annotation of the earlier "Alumni Oxonienses" it was necessary that all the Bishops' certificates of institutions to livings (since the Reformation), now deposited in the Public Record Office, should be laid under contribution, with the result that we have these 150,000 institutions, etc., alphabetically arranged as a clergy list, and have Mr. Foster's greatest work comprised in eight volumes. In recognition of this special service the University conferred upon him in 1892 the degree of Master of Arts honoris causa. His best known critical work was undoubtedly "Chaos," under which category he classed for the first time all known "soi-disant baronets." "Chaos" formed a minor portion of the "Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage," compiled and edited by Mr. Foster in 1880—84, for the pedigrees of which the records of the Heralds' College were unreservedly placed at his service. This prolific worker, besides having the satisfaction of editing Colonel Chester's collection of "marriage licences" for Mr. Quaritch, also issued at his own expense the majority of the Heralds' Visitations of the North, whilst from his study have emanated such useful works as "Men at the Bar," "Scottish Members of Parliament, 1357—1882," "Gray's Inn Admission Register, 1521—1889," "Our Noble and Gentle Families of Royal Descent," and several minor family histories. Within recent years have been published "Some Feudal Coats of Arms," "Two Tudor Books of Arms," "Some Feudal Lords and their Seats," and "Banners, Standards, and Badges," the last three of which Mr. Foster edited for the De Walden Library.

We are indebted to The Times of Aug. 1st, 1905, for the above account, and while sympathizing with his family on Mr. Foster's untimely death, we feel that genealogists have lost a most ardent worker in the study, while we fear that all his heavy labours were never compensated for by sales or otherwise.

GEORGE WILLIAM MARSHALL. LL.D., F.S.A., YORK HERALD.

THE Heralds' College, and, indeed, all lovers of genealogy, have sustained a severe loss in the death of Dr. GEORGE WILLIAM MARSHALL, of Sarnesfield Court, Herefordshire, York Herald in His Majesty's College of Arms, which occurred at his Surrey residence, at Barnes, on the 12th inst. Dr. Marshall was born in Warwickshire in 1839, was LL.D. of Cambridge (Peterhouse), Barrister-at-Law of the Middle Temple, and a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. In 1876 he started the "Genealogist," a quarterly review, which still exists, and his "Genealogists' Guide," which has passed through several editions, at once made his name famous in America as well as at home. As a member of the Harleian Society he edited the Heralds' Visitations of Nottinghamshire of 1569 and 1614, as well as Le Neve's "Pedigrees of Knights made by Charles II., James II., William III., and Queen Anne," and in 1895 his "Handbook to the Ancient Courts of Probate and Depositories of Wills" appeared. In 1887 Dr. Marshall became a member of the Heralds' College, and held the post of Rouge Croix Pursuivant of Arms up to 1904, when he succeeded the present Garter King of Arms as York Herald, and in the College he made a unique collection of MS. and printed parish registers. In 1902 Dr. Marshall was High Sheriff of Herefordshire, was in the Commission of the Peace, and a Deputy-Lieutenant for that county. As a Herald he was a great believer in allusive coats of arms and crests, as he regarded heraldry as a language and not as a pomp, and in consequence that heraldry needed no apology. Having ample means Dr. Marshall formed a large genealogical library at Sarnesfield Court, where his collection of heraldic china is well known.—The Times, 15 Sept. 1905.

THE FAMILY OF WALL.

At page 469 of "Mis. Gen. et Her.," New Series, Vol. I., there is reference to Robert Martin Popham Wall, who married at Plymouth, 29 May 1794, Jane, daughter and coheiress of Humphrey Hall of Manadon, Devonshire. Robert Martin Popham Wall was Lieut.-Col. Oxfordshire Militia, died 25 February 1847, and was buried at Tewkesbury Abbey, as also was his father Lieut.-Col. John Wall, who married, as his first wife, Mary Brilliana, believed to be a daughter of a Robert Martin. Lieut.-Col. John Wall was the eldest son of John Wall, M.D., of Worcester, by his wife Catharine, youngest daughter of Martin Sandys, Barrister-at-Law, uncle to the first Lord Sandys of Ombersley, Worcestershire (creation 20 Dec. 1743). Dr. John Wall is given as the son of John Wall, Mayor of Worcester 1703, and it appears that administration of the estate of the last named John Wall was granted at Worcester Diocesan Probate Registry, 9 September 1734, to his son John Wall, described as of Powick, near Worcester. In Green's "History of Worcester" John Wall, Mayor of that city 1703, is said to be descended from a good family near Leominster, Herefordshire. The "Visitation of Herefordshire, 1683," gives a pedigree of Walle of Kingsland, Herefordshire, and shews also a pedigree from Walter Walle, Mayor of Hereford 1634. I have failed to ascertain from wills at Somerset House, at Worcester, and at Hereford, and from the registers of the parishes of Leominster and Kingsland, both in Herefordshire, the parentage of John Wall, Mayor of Worcester 1703. May I ask for assistance from some of your readers? The late Arthur Henry Wall, at one time of Burghill House, Hereford, and afterwards of Gwernvale House, near Crickhowell, Breconshire, son of Rev. John Wall, M.A., Prebendary of Hereford and Vicar of Kington, Herefordshire, was descended from Walle of Burcher in the parish of Yarpole, Herefordshire, a branch, as I gathered from him by a letter of 22nd August 1874, of the family of Kingsland. I have extracts from wills of several of the name of Wall; of Elizabeth Sandys of Ombersley, daughter of Sir John Pettus of, at one time, Cheston Hall, Suffolk, mother of Martin Sandys, and of Mary, wife of ninth Viscount Hereford, proved 25 June 1714 (P.C.C.); of Martin Sandys, proved 31 January 1753 (P.C.C.); of his widow Elizabeth Sandys, daughter of John Burton of Worcester, proved 23 April 1760 (P.C.C.); and of Gryffydd Price of Penllergare, Glamorganshire (whose widow, maiden names Molly Graves Taylor, married secondly, as his second wife, Lieut.-Col. John Wall), proved 6 August 1787 (P.C.C.).

SOME NOTES ON THE GENEALOGY.

Jacob, afterwards Sir Jacob Acworth, was born about 1673, but the exact date is unknown, for the entry of his baptism has not been found. Like his father John Acworth he became a shipwright, and during a great part of his life he held Government appointments connected with the Navy. By Patent of 6 April 1715 he was made Surveyor, a post which he held till his death thirty-four years afterwards, and on 19 May 1729 he was appointed Commissioner of the Navy, the continued renewal of both offices appearing in frequent entries on the Patent Rolls. On 31 August 1722 he received the honour of knighthood at Portsmouth (Mawson's Obits.), and though, for some reason unknown, the grant does not appear on the Patent Rolls, he is always afterwards described as Sir Jacob, Knt. In contemporary journals and records are many mentions of him, and to some of these allusion may be made. On "Tuesday, 22 Aug. 1732. Several Lords of the Admiralty went to Deptford yard and viewed the 'Deptford,' a 4th rate of 60 guns, rebuilt after a model designed by Sir Jacob Acworth. She is quite flush fore and aft on both decks, with several curious contrivances in her powder room, and two half-decks that will keep the watch dry in the worst of weather" ("Gentleman's Magazine"). In Report 11, part iv., of the Historical Manuscripts Commission is an abstract of an interesting letter of 1 January 1726-7, from Sir Charles Wager, R.N., to Lord Townshend, dated on board the "Kent" at Spithead, giving opinions about Russia, her boundaries, intentions, and wishes, and prospects about the Dutch, Sweden, etc., and saying that, in the event of war with Russia, they have not enough hemp to last the Navy one year, as Sir Jacob Acworth the Surveyor would inform them. In Treasury Papers are notes of expenses allowed to Sir Jacob on some occasions when he is away on official work. But such work did not always absorb the whole of his attention—an instance to the contrary was the picturesque and dangerous structure which many will remember, old Putney Bridge, which is said to have been of his designing.

Sir Jacob was married twice: firstly, on 4 June 1696 at Chatham, to Elizabeth Sliter, who was but seventeen years old at the time. By her he had six children, who appear to have all died in infancy. His second wife was Esther Loten, widow, whom he married 12 February 1709 at Chatham, and who survived him. By her he had two daughters: the elder, Esther, was born 12 May 1711 and baptized on 24 May at Woolwich; the younger, Avice, was born 19 May 1712, baptized 21 May at Woolwich. Avice married in April 1742 George Wheate, afterwards Sir George, 3rd Baronet, and was living in 1768, when she was administrator of the estate of her elder sister. Esther died unmarried on 8 September 1768, and was buried at Blackmore, Essex.

Sir Jacob was a legatee of his uncle Thomas Acworth and administrator of his will. At the time of proving the will (1719) he is described as of St. Olave's, Hart Street, where the old Navy Office then stood; but before that, in 1714, he had bought the manor and priory of Blackmore,† Essex, where his elder daughter is buried, and which manor he devises by his will in 1742. He died on 16 March 1749 ("Gentleman's Magazine"), but the place and date of his burial have not been found. His portrait in oils, taken when he was a boy, is now in the possession of Admiral Sir Erasmus Ommanney,‡ Knt., K.C.B., F.R.S., etc., a fitting resting-place for all that remains of one who was himself concerned all his life with naval matters, and whose record in every incident of it, public or private, is an honourable one.

It is unfortunate that nowhere has proof been discovered of the parentage of some of the children William Acworth the Storekeeper probably had by his third wife, but every Acworth found in any class of public records for more than two hundred years has been accounted for; and Edward, who was buried at Chatham 16 June 1707, must have been either his son or the son of his younger half-brother John.* The earliest certain information of him is in the Admiralty Yard Books, where he appears as a shipwright "prest" (prest, i.e., taken on temporarily) in 1674 in the Chatham yard. Little is known of him, but he married a wife Sarah in or before 1678, for the Chatham Parish Registers shew baptisms of five children of Edward and Sarah Acworth, beginning in 1679. His wife Sarah was buried at Chatham 11 September 1697, and on his own death, which took place 8 June 1707, he leaves a relict Catherine, to whom administration of his estate is granted (P.C.C.), and to whom the wages due to him from the Yard are paid. On 6 November 1704 he was appointed administrator, as principal creditor, of Ambrose Creek of Chatham and of H.M.S. "Lenox," bachelor (Cons. Rochester).

Of his children, two died in infancy. A son, whom he named Daniel after his cousin, marries Elizabeth Eastman 1 June 1702, at Chatham, and they have four children, in whom again the family names of Jacob, etc., are repeated, but who all die in infancy. Another son, Dennis, probably died young, leaving but one other named after himself to continue the family line. There are found at Chatham at the same time with Edward a Robert and a Francis Acworth, the former probably his brother, and possibly also the latter. Robert died the same year as himself, and was buried at Chatham 28 March 1706-7. He also, like his brother, had a wife named Sarah, also several children who probably all died young. Francis married 16 April 1699, at Chatham, Ellanor Platt, but in 1705 she had evidently died, for on 26 August in that year Francis and Amy Acworth have a daughter Sarah baptized. Neither Robert nor Francis appears to have left any will.

Edward, the son of Edward Acworth, was baptized at Chatham 21 September 1684, and became, like his father, a shipwright. In 1704 he appears in the Yard Books as "servant" to his father, and in 1707 to Widow Acworth. He is shipwright in 1710. He died on 12 October 1748 and was buried on 17 October, aged 64, at Chatham, where there is a tablet to him and his relict. He married three times, his first wife being Ellanor, buried at Chatham 30 January 1724; the second Amy, buried 9 September 1730; the third Anne (? Mortimer—family information), who survived him and was buried at Chatham 28 September 1768, aged 66. By his first wife Edward had a daughter, who died young, and a son named after himself; by his third he had two daughters, who died unmarried, and a son James. He left no will, and administration of his estate was granted to his son Edward and to Isaac Wilkins, shipwright, his widow Ann renouncing (Arch. Rochester).

Edward Acworth, baptized 20 March 1714-15, was the third of his name, as well as of his profession, in direct descent from father to son. In the Admiralty Yard Books, Chatham Yard, he appears as servant to Mr. Roswell in 1737, to the executors of same in 1738, as shipwright in 1739. This Roswell is probably the John Roswell who, with Peter Pett, witnesses, on 27 September 1691, the will of Rowland Crispe; and a reference to the Pett pedigree, which has the latter name on it, will indicate the probability that business or other connection with that

* The will, long sought for, has now been found of William Acworth's third wife, at the time of her death widow of Capel Hanbury, and from this it is clear that Edward's father was John Acworth. It is unfortunate the discovery was only made after the pedigree, which now requires this correction, had been printed.

family had continued through several generations. Edward married 20 September 1754, at Chatham, Elizabeth Nairne. He died in 1775, and his wife, who survived him, appears by the year of probate of her will to have died in 1786. He, strange to say, in his will makes no mention of any children, but a daughter Sarah, wife of Richard Simmons of Chatham, gent., was living 1769, as shewn by her husband's will in Arch. Rochester; and a daughter Elizabeth was living in 1786, the wife of Joseph Davies, as appears from his widow's will in P.C.C. (62, Norfolk). Edward is not known to have had a son, and his younger brother James, one of his only three legatees, is left to continue the pedigree.

James Acworth, who, like his brother, was a shipwright, was baptized 2 December 1732 at Chatham; there also he was buried on 22 May 1814, a tablet giving his age as 82. He married Elizabeth Dawson at Debtling, and by her had a numerous family. His wife survived him, and was buried at Chatham 30 November 1819, age 77, administration of her estate being granted to her son William (Arch. Rochester).

From James Acworth, died 1814, is descended every male now living in this country who bears his family name. To find each one the writer has searched all existing directories; and, that he might place them correctly, he has been at the trouble of seeking each out and tracing his descent. Since these notes were begun more facts have come to light; and, amongst others, the discovery has been made that a line of the family, unheard of here, has existed in the United States of America. The line probably still survives, and though it has not yet been found possible to obtain full information about it, without doubt any Acworths now living in America and rightly bearing the name are also descendants of James. James, a younger son of James Acworth, born 1767, is known to have emigrated to America, and, till now, it has been thought that he died there without issue, for he was not heard of again. It seems, however, that he settled in the Southern States, where he or his sons became slave owners. As often happened, some of the slaves owned adopted the name of the family they served, and there is in New York to-day at least one black person of whole colour who is known by the name Acworth.

Dr. J. J. Acworth, the present head of the family, is a man of many parts, but is pre-eminently scientific. He early evinced a strong bent for science and its practical applications, and after studying under the most able Professors in England he further pursued his studies in Germany and obtained his degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Erlangen. Dr. Acworth has devoted much of his time and energies to original research, and has found a scope for his special scientific knowledge and experience in the formation and direction of the Imperial Dry Plate Company, Limited, which in a comparatively short time has grown to be the largest dry plate manufactory in the world. Always interested in art, he is an accomplished musician, an enthusiastic motorist, an ardent sportsman, and a wide traveller.

It may be interesting to add that Dr. Acworth's wife and his younger sister are scientific, the former being an Associate of the Royal College of Science, London, and the latter a Doctor of Medicine.

It is not intended to mention here particularly other members of the family in detail. Their records may in most cases be seen in University Calendars, Clergy or Law Lists, and other books of reference. Exceptions must, however, be made in the case of H. A. Acworth, Esq., C.I.E., retired Indian Civil Servant, and of his cousin W. M. Acworth, Esq., a successful advocate practising at the Parliamentary Bar. Both are authors of some repute, and the books of the latter on railway matters are generally acknowledged to be the best of their kind on the subjects with which they deal.

Captain Louis Raymond Acworth, son of George Brindley Acworth, Esq., F.S.A., is in the Duke of Wellington's West Riding Regiment. He went through the South African War, in which he was twice wounded. His elder brother, Captain George Pelham Aufrère Acworth, R.E., is acting instructor in submarine mining at S.M.E., Chatham.

In the genealogical notes here ending no attempt has been made to conceal the fact that at more than one step evidence amounting to legal proof of parentage is wanting. But whether—to instance one of these steps—Edward Acworth, died 1707, was the son of William of Woolwich, or of his younger half-brother John, there can be none whatever that the present family are all descended from John Acworth, buried at Luton 1513. Their case is exceptional and perhaps unique. There is probably no other family of which it can be said that every occurrence of the name during the last four hundred years can be referred to the place it should occupy on a genealogical tree, always with indications sufficient, and nearly always with actual proof. Should any reader have happened to meet with information that would clear up such doubtful points as that just mentioned, he would confer a favour by imparting it; and all criticisms regarding the whole or any part of these notes would be cordially welcomed.

Bookplate of W. Bruce Bannerman, F.S.A.

The accompanying impression is a photogravure reproduction of a Bookplate (now out of print), designed and engraved on copper by Mr. C. W. Sherborn, R.E., a most distinguished engraver of Bookplates.

The following blazon is extracted from the "Public Register of all Arms and Bearings in Scotland" (Lyon Office, Edinburgh) :—

ARMS: Gules, a fess between two boars' heads erased or, in chief, and a banner displayed bendways argent, thereon a canton azure charged with a saltire of the third.

CREST: A demi-man in armour affrontée, his dexter hand grasping a sword, all proper, and his sinister hand holding a banner displayed as in the arms.

MOTTO: In an escrol over the same the motto, "PRO PATRIA."

Other designs of Bookplates, by various artists, have been reproduced at different times in the "Ex Libris Journal," "The Art of Heraldry," and "Armorial Families."

EXTRACTS FROM WILLS, REGISTERS, ETC.

Having thus completed the copies of the Inscriptions in the Church and Churchyard, which remain or of which we have any record, the following additional notes and extracts from the Registers cannot fail to be of interest :—

The "New View of London" mentions a ledger-stone as being within the Communion rails. This is gone now, but the following inscription and arms are preserved by the "New View," which states that it is "under that of his lady, who died September the 18th, 1691" : "Here lyes the above mentioned Sir JOHN LANIER, one of Their Majesties Lieutenant Generals who was at the Reduction of Scotland and Ireland, and died at Brusses of his wounds that he received at the Battel of Enghein in Flanders, the 29th day of July 1692." Arms: A saltire of lozenges between four eagles displayed ; impaling, three bendlets. This corrects the statement in the "Dictionary of National Biography" that he died a bachelor. The arms on the slab were LANIER of Paris: Azure, seventeen lozenges conjoined in saltire or, between four eagles displayed argent. The impaled coat it is difficult to identify, as no colours are given. The following abstract of his will supplies some additional particulars of his relations :—

SIR JOHN LANIER of S. Anne's in Middlesex, Knt. Will dated 1 April 1692. Is weak in body but of perfect mind. Nephew Captain John Dean a messuage in Aldersgate Street, London, formerly known as the Bull Inn and now in the tenure of Dr. Cox. Niece Elizabeth Gwin £50 out of Ricks's mortgage. Niece Eleanor Dean £500 out of Verignie's mortgage upon Skyers Hall in Yorkshire. To "Mistrisse Marguerit Kelling al's Smith" £50 a year out of messuages in Long Acre in the parish of S. Martin's-in-the-Fields for her life. Cousin Thomas Lanier to select the best piece of testator's plate. If testator dies in the field his two servants John Comar and Zachary Wright to have their horses if still in testator's service and £30 each above what is due to them for wages. To cousin Thomas Lanier, his wife, Thomas Frekleton, and goddau. Florence Frekleton £10 each for mourning. £300 and no more about his burial, of which £20 to the poor of the parish where he is buried. To the child unborn of Mrs. Margaret Kelling al's Smith the residue of messuages and all other estate to such child, and the child to be executor when seventeen years of age, the said Margaret Kelling al's Smith, Mrs. Anne Dunn, Thomas Lanier, and Thomas Frekleton, Esq., to be executors in trust, but if such child dies then niece Eleanor Dean to be residuary legatee and executrix. (P.C.C., 187-8, Fane.)

Proved 4 Oct. 1692 by the executors in trust.

In the "Dictionary of National Biography" there is a short notice of Sir John Lanier, from which it appears that he had a distinguished military career. He lost an eye while serving with the English Auxiliaries under the Duke of Monmouth in France, and was afterwards knighted and made Governor of Jersey, but on the accession of James II. he was recalled, and in 1687 given the command of the Queen's Regiment of Horse and became a Lieutenant-General the next year. He declared for William of Orange, and was sent to take Edinburgh Castle, which surrendered to him, and afterwards did good service in reducing Ireland, and led his regiment at the Battle of the Boyne. In 1691 he was offered a pension of £1500 a year on condition of resigning his commission, but he refused, and the King made him one of his Generals of Horse in Flanders, where he was mortally wounded at the Battle of Steenkirk on the 3rd of August 1692, dying a few days after (according to the above authority), which also says he died a bachelor. This the above monument shews to be an error, as does also the register of the burial of his wife. His name does not appear in "Le Neve's Pedigrees of Knights," published by the Harleian Society.

The inscription to Mrs. Ann Fountain (p. 133) is followed by the abstract of her nephew Michael Fountain's will. The following are extracts from the will of her father, which shews how the French de la Fountaine had merged into the English Fountain :—

Michael Dieu de la Fountaine of the parish of S. Ann, Westminster. Will dated 18 Sep. 1728. To be buried in the church of S. Ann in the same grave with testator's late wife. To dau. Ann Esther in consideration she has cost nothing for maintenance since the death of Mr. James de la Britonniers, £2300, also the following plate: the great coffee-pot, teapot with a sawcer, milk pot, small sawcer, two candlesticks, a pair of snuffers, three spoons, three forks, salt cellar, and six teaspoons, all of silver gilt, damask linen and bedding of testator's bed. To dau. Mary Magdalene £1500, and an annuity of £20 yearly out of the Exchequer Bond No. 721, also silver, etc., as before. Son Charles the great salver, two new candlesticks rounded at the bottom, nine spoons, and nine new forks and twelve knives, also the annuity on his life Exchequer Bond No. 720, and he to be residuary legatee, paying to Mrs. Susanna Du Bordieu his aunt £50, which was given to her for life by Mr. de la Bretonniere, and make good the agreement between her and testator's late dear wife. Poor of the church of St. Low £30. Executors: Messrs. Thomas Heupend and Peter James Dieu Du Desert. Witnesses: Matthew Du Bourdieu, Lewis Desiles.

Codicil dated 3 Jan. 1732-3. Revokes the gift to son Charles of the nine spoons and forks and the knives with silver hafts, which are to be between his two daughters, and in place gives Charles the great silver coffee-pot.

Translated by Peter St. Eloy, Notary Public. On the 24th Jan. 1732 appeared Charles Noiray of St. Stephen's Walbrooke, merchant, and Charles de la Fountaine of St. Bennett's Shearhogg, merchant, and swore to the writing of the deceased. (P.C.C., 8, Price.)

Proved 23 Jan. 1732.

It may be of interest to give the following abstract of the will of Sir Comport Fytch. His death is entered in the Register of Bath Abbey as taking place at the house of a Mr. Chapman, from which he was carried away to be buried; but they failed to get the name quite right:—

Sir Comport Fytch of Mount Maskhall in the parish of North Cray in Kent, Bart., only son and heir of Sir Thomas Fytch, late of Southend, near Eltham in Kent, Knight and Baronet, deceased. Will dated 10 Feb. 1717. Is in good health of body and of perfect mind. To be buried by the direction of wife Dame Ann Fytch, who is to be his sole executrix. Several of his manors, lands, tenements, etc., are already settled; he confirms the deed of settlement. Dau. Ann Fytch £30 yearly for her life out of messuages, farms, etc., lately purchased of Brigadeer Jocelyne and the Lady Twysden his wife, but if son William Fytch shall die without issue, or having barred testator's marriage settlement, then that annuity to cease as she will then be provided for by that settlement. The estate settled on dau. Alice may be redeemed by said son William, he paying his sister Alice £2500, otherwise she to have all messuages, etc., in London and Westminster. If son dies without issue then all estates to dau. Alice and to her lawful issue, paying to said dau. Ann £100 yearly for her life. (P.C.C., 25, Buckingham.)

Proved 3 Feb. 1720-21.

The "New View" has also preserved one memorial in the churchyard, which doubtless with others is no longer to be found. It is stated to be "on a black marble tombstone":—"Mrs Mary Cage, wife of John Blackwell, Esq., now the relict of Tobias Cage, Esq., who, after a pilgrimage of 68 years in a troublesome world, lay down here to rest in hopes of a Joyful Resurrection. Obiit July 6, 1697."

Arms on a lozenge: Per pale [gules and vert], a saltire [or], CAGE; impaling, ... on a chevron . . . . three cinquefoils . . . . and in chief a helmet. The helmet is doubtless an unrecorded addition to the arms, and is not to be found in Papworth. As no colours are given, and there are several coats having three cinquefoils on a chevron, it cannot be assigned with any certainty.

ARNOLD. The arms given with this monument (see p. 185) are as they appear, so far as the distance above the floor allows them to be seen, but the following arms were granted to their ancestor George Arnold of Arnold's Lodge in Ashby St. Leger in Northamptonshire, Esq., by John Anstis, Garter King of Arms, on 3rd June 1725, viz.: Gules, a chevron engrailed argent gutte-de-poix, couple-closed plain or, between three pheons of the last. Crest: A demi-tiger rampant-reguardant sable bezantée, maned, tusked, and holding between its paws a pheon, all gold. (Vide Add. MS. 35,336, p. 303, College of Arms, Grants, vol. vii., fo. 308.)

For a pedigree, see Burke's "Landed Gentry."

Sir JOHN MACPHERSON (p. 187) was a younger son of the Rev. John Macpherson, D.D., an eminent Scottish divine, by his wife, a daughter of . . . . Macleod of Bemire. Sir John, who was created a baronet 27 Jan. 1786, died unmarried, and his title expired with him.

ADDENDA.

By the courtesy of the Rev. J. H. CARDWELL, the Rector of St. Anne's Church, we have been favoured with the following:—

In 1897 rubbings were taken of all the legible inscriptions upon the tombstones in the aisle passages previous to their being covered with Mosaic pavement. The following are a few details of the inscriptions:

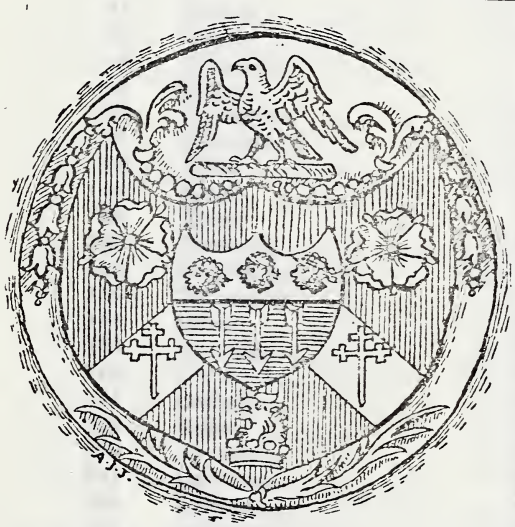
JACOB, HILDEBRAND. [Coat of Arms at head of tombstone; see Burke's "Extinct Baronetage." Family now represented by a family named Oakes.]
MACLEOD, RODERICK, Rector of St Anne's, died Dec. 14th, 1845, aged 92 years.



WILLIAM WARD, son of JOHN WARD, Esqre, & SOPHIA his wife, Aug. 10, 1794; died Nov. 8, 179–.

HENRY WARD, born Jan. 30th, 18—; died Aug. 12, 1814.

JAMES WARD, born Feb. 8, 17—; died April 6, 1814.

JOHN WARD, Esqr, Father of the above, born Aug. 15, 1717; died Oct. 9, 1823.

JOHN WARD, son of the above, b. June 30, 1792; died Sept. 4, 1839.

[The coat of arms on the grave is shewn here.]

These Arms are on the floor-slab, but they are not to be found in Papworth's Ordinary, the nearest approach being: Argent, on a chevron between three roses gules, an annulet or, there assigned to Warde, Lord Mayor of London in 1375, and to Sir John Wyard. The difference it will be seen is considerable, and the use of a baron's coronet with the lion's head is rather remarkable. The escutcheon for the wife has the arms of a family of Watts.

FRANCIS RAVEN, born December the 27th, 17—; died April the 10th, 17—.
MARY RAVEN, born Novr the 5th, 175–, who died May the 19th, 17—.

THE ORIGIN

THE Rev. W. M. Noble having been asked to make an enquiry into the ancestry of Sir William Dyer, the first Baronet, of the Swinnerton Dyer line, I had the pleasure of giving him some help in the matter, and at his request have put together the result of our investigations.

There has always been some difficulty as to the origin of this family—on the one hand most of the Baronetages mention Sir William as of a Wiltshire family: on the other, in 1854 the then head of the house printed a pedigree duly certified by "The King's Heralds and Pursuivants of the College of Arms, London, as faithfully extracted from the records of the College," and sealed with its seal, which tells a different story. This faithful extract makes the first Baronet a cadet of the Somerset family, of which Chief Justice Dyer was a member, by joining together part of the Visitation of Somerset of 1623 with part of the Visitation of Middlesex of 1663 with continuations downwards.

Obviously the critical point in this narrative is the identification of George, second son of George Dyer of Bratton, aged 34 in 1623, with George Dyer of Heytesbury. The evidence for the first George is the Somerset Visitation of 1623, the second George occurs in the Visitation of Middlesex forty years later, but why the two Georges should be made one the King's Heralds and Pursuivants offer no reason, much less proof.

Similarly Mr. Blades, an authority who cannot be neglected, gives nothing to support his confident assertion that "the present Baronets, the Swinnerton Dyers, are descended from John Dyer of Roundhill, by Jane his second wife the daughter of John Ernley of Cannynges in Wiltshire."—"N. and Q.," 7 S. viii., 137.

Under these circumstances it became interesting to look up the evidences to which the College of Arms and Mr. Blades had unfortunately neglected to give references. With this object a fairly diligent search was made among likely documents for George Dyer of Bratton and Heytesbury, but with no result. Of George of Bratton there was a little, of George of Heytesbury much, but of any one Dyer, George or otherwise, connected with both places, nothing.

Discouraged but not defeated it seemed better to begin at the beginning, and starting with the first Baronet to trace his family backwards, step by step, as far as reliable evidence was forthcoming. This method has produced more than could have been reasonably expected.

In the Patent creating William Dyer, Esquire, a Baronet, he is described of Tottenham in the county of Middlesex (Patent Roll 30 Car. II., part 2, m. 15), and it is known that his wife was a Swinnerton. In the Visitation of Middlesex for 1663 a signed pedigree of William Dyer of Tottenham is recorded. Thomazine Swinnerton is given as the wife of William Dyer, and Swinnerton Dyer as his son. George Dyer of Heytesbury in Wilts is his father, and Sarah, daughter of .... Rolfe of Enford in the same county, is his mother, and there the story as told by the founder of the family ends.

A lucky search by Mr. Noble at Salisbury carried the history a stage further. The marriage allegation of George Dyer turned up, and it gives the following particulars:—He was at the time it was made of Sherrington in Wiltshire, a yeoman under full age, with his father and mother living; his proposed wife was Sarah

* Communicated by MARK W. BULLEN, Esq.

Rolfe of Steeple Langford in the same county, her mother living, and so much John Gerle of Steeple Langford, yeoman, also alleged, and offered himself ready to justify upon oath. The allegation is dated 30 October 1616, and it at once disposes of the case set up in the pedigree printed by Sir Thomas Dyer, for if George Dyer, the husband of Sarah Rolfe, alleged the consent of his parents, he must have been under age at the time, i.e. born in or after 1595, whereas we know that George, the second son of George of Bratton, was born in 1589 on the evidence of his father, who, in 1623, signed the Somerset Visitation. A reasonably close search through likely records gave nothing important in connection with either Steeple Langford or Sherrington, and as much of their Registers as remains is too late to be of service. But at Boyton, which is about two and a half miles from Heytesbury, six from Steeple Langton, and three-quarters of a mile from Sherrington, there are the following entries:—

Geo. Son of Raffe Diar was baptized 24th of October 1596.
Henry the sonne of Raffe Dyer baptized 14 October 1597.
Richard Deyar the sonne of Raphe Dier baptized the 8th January $\frac{1599}{1600}$.
Ralfe Dyer, churchwarden, 1620.

George Dyer of Heytesbury, gentleman, died in 1661, having made a nuncupative will, now at Somerset House (Peculiar of the Dean of Sarum). By it he leaves all his estate to his now wife Constance, his children by a former wife having had their portions already. His inventory shews the considerable total of £455 odd, of which £100 is for "sheep of all sorts" and £20 for wool.

It may be taken as proved that he was the George, son of Ralph Diar of the Boyton Register. The dates agree, for if born in 1596 he would be old enough to marry in 1616, but would still require the consent of his parents. His father was certainly living, for he was churchwarden in 1620. There is no evidence that his mother was dead. He would be the brother of Richard Deyar baptized in 1600 and married in 1622, and the children's names in the two families shew too many agreements to make a mere coincidence likely. George Dyer of Heytesbury had by his two wives five sons. Among these there is a William, a Ralfe, and a Richard (Heytesbury Registers). Richard Dyer of Boyton had six sons, and they include a William, two Ralfes, a Richard, and a George (Boyton Register). Going a generation further back the parentage of Ralfe of Boyton is not proved, but it may be taken as in the highest degree probable that he was a member of a family living in Enford since 1543. In support of this statement the following documents are relied upon, and it will be seen that they throw a very strong light on the families of Dyer and Rolfe and their connection, only as much has been given in each case as is necessary to the matter in hand:—

Bequests to be paid to sons at 21 and daughters at 20 years of age. John Gearle and Marmaducke Gearle, brethren-in-law, overseers. Residue to wife Mary, who is sole executrix.

Proved 10 Novembor [sic] 1613. (Principal Registry, Archdeaconry of Sarum, book viii., fo. 194.)

WILL OF JOHN GERLE OF LONGSTREET IN THE PARISH OF ENFORD, GENTLEMAN.

Will dated 26 September 1633. To the poor of Enford on funeral day 40s. To niece Mary Dycke £50 to be paid within two years of my decease. To son Alexander all goods, plate, personal estate and copyhold which one Winter lately held. Son-in-law William Rolfe, Esquire, William Tipper of Seene, and son Alexander, executors. The £30 per annum which I have given to my son Thomas during my life to be satisfied out of my ferme. The marke of John Gerle. Witnesses: Henry Colepepper, the mark of William Head, Thomas Carter.

Proved 13 February 1633-4. (P.C.C., 20 Seager.)

The complaint of Mary Dyke of Chizenbury in Wilts. Filed 14 June 14 Car. I.—John Gerle, late of Longfishhide otherwise Longstreete in the parish of Enford, gentleman, became on the 10th March 6 Car. I. bound to the complainant for the payment of £75 at the time of his decease, and the same John Gerle did by his will dated 26 September 9 Car. I. bequeath to the complainant his near kinswoman the sum of £50 to be paid within two years of his decease; of this will he appointed Alexander Gerle, his son, his executor, and shortly after died possessed of estate to the value of £2000 and more. Alexander Gerle proved the will and took to himself among other things a lease for 99 years of the farm of Longstreet in Enford terminable on the lives of John Gerle the elder and John and Alexander his sons. Complainant sued Alexander at the Autumn Assizes of 1637, and obtained judgment against him, upon which, and in order to avoid payment, he conveyed his estate to Robert Blake of Eastington in Hants, gentleman, and George Dyer of Hatesbury in Wilts, gentleman, in trust for his children, and in order to defraud the complainant.

The answer of George Dyer and Robert Blake, gentlemen.—They deny the material facts of the complainant's case except as regards the legacy, give contradictory statements as to the property and its disposal, and say that the estate was not sufficient to satisfy the claims on it. There are the following additional facts: Thomas Gerle was the brother of Alexander Gerle. Katherine the daughter of Kent of Devizes was the wife of Alexander, and he left one son aged one year. The executors of John Gerle's will were his son Alexander, William Rolfe, Esq., and William Typper. The answer of William Rolfe states that John Gerle was the uncle of Mary Dycke the complainant and mentions Nicholas Blake.

(Record Office, Chancery B. and A., Car. I., D. 47, 63.)

The last Will and Testament of Thomas Girle.

Will dated 27 March 1643. He bequeaths his estate to four persons equally between them. To cousin William Dyer, to cousin William Blake, to cousin Sarah Blake, and to John Walker, and these he makes his executors; and he here protests upon oath that there has been no bargain or promise between himself and his cousin Robert Blake to hinder his executors of any part or parcel of his estate. The mark of Thomas Girle.

Proved by William Blake and William Dyer, 2 May 1643. (P.C.C., 35 Crane.)

28 November 1645. The complaint of Wm Blake, citizen and vintner of London, William Dyer of London, gent., and .... Cross and Sarah his wife, otherwise called Sarah Blake, ex'ors of the will of Thomas Gerle, gent. Saunder Gerle, deceased, elder brother of testator, was seised for life of a messuage and lands in Longstreete in Enford of the value of £160 per annum, subject to the payment of £25 per annum to the testator during the life of Saunder Gerle, and on his death the whole estate to go to the testator for life. Saunder Gerle so seised desired about eight years past to raise money on the estate, but finding difficulties, became a suitor to his brother Thomas to take a sum down for his interest, and to join in a conveyance, and this Thomas did for a consideration of £300. Shortly after the estate was sold for £2000, of which £300 was paid to George Dyer of ...., gent., testator's brother-in-law. A claim is made by William Blake, in which William Dyer and Sarah Blake (otherwise Cross) join for money paid for the support of the testator, and they charge the defendants with misappropriating the £300 and £800 left in their hands by Alexander Gerle to secure his brother Thomas against certain liabilities incurred for him, Alexander.

The answer of George Dyer, gentleman, states that before the exhibition of the bill of complaint in this cause one William Dyer of Clifford's Inn, gent., one of the executors of Thomas Gerle, had given him a deed of release by the name of George Deyer of Hietesbury, gentleman, from all manner of actions, causes, bonds, bills, and debts from the beginning of the world to the date of the release.

(Record Office, Chancery B. and A., Car. I., B. 25, 65.)

William Rolfe of Enford, mentioned more than once in these abstracts, was a member of a family of well-to-do yeomen, and like his brother-in-law Dyer ended his life among the gentry of his county. He was specially admitted a member of the Inner Temple in 1617. (Inner Temple Records, ii., 103.)

In 1623 Thomas Jeay assigned to William Rolfe, Esquire, his manors of Fitterton and Combe in the parish of Enford. (Wilts Inquisitions P. M., p. 185. British Record Society.)

In 1628 he was M.P. for Heytesbury (Return of Members of Parliament, part i., 478), Clerk of the Warrants, 1633 (Inner Temple Records, ii., 210), and seven years later is described as lord of the manor of Heytesbury (Wilts Inquisitions P. M., p. 306). He married firstly Sarah, daughter and coheir of Sir Richard Deane, Alderman of Bridge Without, 1619, Mayor 1628, who mentions him in his will, dated July 1635, as his loving son, and appoints him with his other loving sons John Goodwin and Robert Mildmay, Esquires, his Executors. (P.C.C., 82 Sadler.)

In his will, proved 7 May 1646, he is described as William Rolfe of the Inner Temple, London, Esquire. His lands in the county of Warwick are to be sold by his wife Sarah by the advice of his brothers John Goodwin and William Methold, Esquires, the latter probably the husband of Robert Mildmay's widow. £500 is left "to my cousin William Dyar," £300 to "cousin" Margaret Blake. Brothers John Goodwin and William Methold are overseers, and wife Sarah sole executrix. He died childless. (P.C.C., 73 Twisse.)

The arms: Argent, three ravens proper, are given to Rolfe of Enford in Gore's "Blazon of Wiltshire Gentry, 1663" (Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 28020, fo. 97), and in the Visitation of Wilts, 1623, with additions (Harl. MS. 1443). His mother Sarah Blake, married afterwards to John Gerle of Enford, no doubt the same John who spoke for George Dyer when he went to get his marriage licence, came of a substantial family in Hampshire. Her brother William of Haleshouse* in Middlesex, Justice of the Peace and a Member of the Inner Temple, was knighted at Whitehall in 1627 (Harl. MS. 6062, 82). He died at Kensington 2 November 1630, "a religious, charitable good friend to this church and parish" (Kensington Register, Harl. Soc., xvi., p. 121). His son, another William, also a member of the same Inn, died in 1645. He directs that he shall be buried in the Temple Church. His "office called the Fine Office" is to be sold. His loving friends William Rolfe, John Goodwin, and William Metholde, esquires, are executors, and Wiliam Beverley is a witness. (P.C.C., 94 Rivers.)

It is not every country lad who goes to Town with an uncle in Parliament, a Lord Mayor and a Justice of the Peace as near connections. William Dyer had good opportunities, and as we know he made good use of them.

Genealogical Notes and Queries.

THOMAS HOWARD DE DUBLIN, ARMIGER, DECEASED ABOUT 1709.

Among the 'Genealogical Notes and Queries' published in the "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica" for December 1895 (Third Series, Vol. I.) is one signed "F.," asking for information respecting the ancestry of the above, who is believed by his descendants to have been the son of either Sir Francis Howard of Corby, or Sir Charles Howard of Croglin, co. Cumberland.

If "F." or any descendants of the said Thomas Howard will communicate their name and address to the Editor of "Miscellanea Genealogica et Heraldica," 140 Wardour Street, London, it is possible that he may now be able to put them in the way of obtaining information on the subject.

Reviews.

Register of Burials at the Temple Church, 1628—1853. With an Introduction by the Rev. H. G. Woods, D.D., Master of the Temple. London: Henry Sotheran and Co. 1905.

This is an imperial quarto volume, very carefully prepared and well read. It records all the deaths from 1628 to 1853, and the returns struck us as very exceptional in the number of deaths of foundlings, each having the surname of Temple, and children, in the eighteenth century more particularly, as well as of "butlers" of the Temple, watchmen, porters, and peruke makers, "watchpots" and "turnspits." It is to be noticed, too, how very few are returned as dying of the plague, Nathaniel Palgrave of the Inner Temple, buried in the inner churchyard 8 August 1665, being the first-mentioned victim. There is this, the Editor remarks, that there has been found no Registers before that given beginning 1628, although the Temple dates back half the time over which its written history extends, and thus there is a shrine of unremembered dead, as Dugdale quotes some thirty-five epitaphs prior to 1628. We note that the Editor refers to the deaths of the foundlings, but of how the entries became so numerous no explanation is given, except that the Temple acquired the notoriety from the general levity of the neighbourhood. We know of no other institution for foundlings except the Foundling Hospital in Guilford Street, but the Temple at that time must have been notorious when so many died there as 198, and 251 were baptized, as in 1793 there were but three, and only one in 1830. The Editor notes that up to 1865 the last survivor of the foundlings was receiving eleven shillings a week from both Temples.

Altogether the Work shews great care in compilation, and such a record is worthy of all the attention that the Master of the Temple, the Rev. Dr. H. G. Woods, has given it.

The Pedigree of Hunter of Abbotshill and Barjarg and cadet Families. Compiled by Andrew Alexander Hunter. London: Elliot Stock, 62 Paternoster Row. 1905. Price 30s.

This is a painstaking family record of the Hunters of Abbotshill and Barjarg with their various branches. The pedigree begins in 1569, and in 1813 William Francis Hunter was allied to Miss Jane Arundell, the heiress of Francis St. Aubyn of Collin Mixton; she died in 1829, and his family took the name of Arundell-Hunter, and his son became William Francis Hunter-

Arundell, 4th of Barjarg, etc. This Hunter disentailed the estate, and left it to the descendants of his second sister Mariamne, who died in 1887, and to the descendants of her youngest daughter Mary, who married Mr. T. H. Wadd, and she died in 1888. There are six photographs of Barjarg Tower given, both of the front and from the garden, which add to the attractiveness of the Work, and also three facsimiles of Grants of Arms in 1685, 1824, and 1825, the latter on the marriage of Miss Arundell St. Aubyn in 1813.

The Hunters acquired the lands of Abbotshill from Alan Stewart, Abbot of Crossraguel, who it was said was roasted to death by the Earl of Cassillis in the black vaults of Dunure in 1570, the object of the Earl being to obtain possession of the Abbey and its livings.

The Pedigree of Hunter of Bonnytoun begins in 1695 with Andrew Hunter of Abbotshill, whose son the Rev. Dr. Andrew Hunter sold Abbotshill and purchased Barjarg in 1744. His brother John Hunter of Bonnytoun carries the line down to William Francis Ernest Hunter, born in May 1892.

Besides the above two Pedigrees there are separate ones given of Hunter-Blair of Blairquhan, who married Jane, heiress of John Blair of Dunskey, who took the name of Blair on his wife succeeding to Dunskey, and was created a Baronet in 1786, dying in 1787, leaving fourteen children. His great-grandson is Rev. Sir David Hunter, 5th Baronet, who was born in September 1853. The next Pedigree is Hunter of Auchterarder, purchased by Lieut.-Colonel James Hunter, which was inherited by his nephew Major Patrick Hunter. Another Pedigree gives us James Hunter of Thurston, 7th of Abbotsville, and who married Janet, daughter of John Fergusson of Craigdarroch, and whose daughter married Robert Hunter, the first of Thurston, finally succeeded by Richard Hunter, 5th of Thurston, born January 1851, who married Evelyn Mary, daughter of Sir William Miller, and had a son born June 1886.

The Work is amply illustrated by eight Portraits on Plate VIII., ending with W. F. Hunter-Arundell, 4th of Barjarg, and his wife. Plate IX. gives us eight more portraits of the Hunters of Doonholme. Plate XIX. gives eight portraits of the Hunter-Blairs of Blairquhan, down to the Rev. Sir David Hunter-Blair. Plate XXI. gives eight portraits of Hunters of Auchterarder, and Plate XXV. gives eight more portraits of the Hunters of Thurston, thus completing thirty-two family portraits which we must congratulate the Compiler, Mr. Andrew Alexander Hunter, upon obtaining, and having them reproduced with such excellent taste.

Besides the above portraits is a view of Doonholm, Ayrshire, copy of an original painting of Sir James Hunter-Blair, first Bart., and family in 1786; view of Auchterarder House, Perthshire; and three views of Thurston House, Haddingtonshire. Plates are given of the Armorial Bearings to Sir James in 1780, the Patent of Baronetcy granted to Sir James Hunter-Blair in 1786, Armorial Bearings to Sir James in 1780, to Sir David in 1827, and to Edward Hunter-Blair in 1850; also one to Robert Hunter of Thurston in 1773.

The Work is commemorative of that lovable pride of ancestry which forms the highest trait in the English nation, and when a history is issued at such a low price as 30s. it deserves a speedy sale of all the copies printed. It forms a most picturesque addition to any library, and we heartily thank the Compiler for his elaborate family history.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record. Vol. XXXVI., No. 4, for October 1905. New York: 226 West 58th Street.

THIS Part begins with a Steel-plate Portrait of the seventh President of America, Thomas G. Evans of New Brighton, Staten Island, and a good account is given of him. The genealogy of the Wemple family is next given, and also the history of the Schermerhorn family; the King family in England is then treated. The English ancestry of Richard More of the "Mayflower" is interesting, and their ancient house at More was Larden Hall, near Shrewsbury, a very good engraving of which is given. An account of the Throope family of Lebanon, and Tombstone Inscriptions at the old Presbyterian Church at New Jersey, with reviews, conclude the Part. There is an excellent Index for this Volume, and Titles are also given.

Fenland Notes and Queries. Part 67. October 1905. Peterborough: George C. Caster, Market Place.

THIS Part begins with a view of Soham, Cambridgeshire, and Extracts from some Wills, and also an account of Soham Mere. A view of Soham Church is also given—a splendid erection standing in its own grounds. The question of the Drainage of the Great Level is still carried on; and an account of St. Neot's body at Crowland, and how apprehensions being entertained of the Danes invading the district made the inhabitants remove his body so as to make it appear that it had been stolen to enrich a neighbouring monastery. Such was the veneration for his remains, that it is stated that Archbishop Anselm kept back one arm of this Saint, although he replaced all the bones carefully, "excepting one little bit which he kept for himself." Local Government at Peterborough between 1315 and 1402 is described, and also an account of Yorke's Bank, which failed in 1861.

The Journal of the Ex Libris Society. Parts 7—10. July to October 1905. London: A. and C. Black, Soho Square.

THESE Parts keep up the prestige of their predecessors, and the frontispiece plates include an excellent example of that of "George Frederick Ernest Albert, Prince of Wales," one to Sir James Balfour Paul, Knt., Lord Lyon King of Arms, printed on toned ground, and a plain circular Arms of William Burch. Besides these are four by Mr. Graham Johnston of Edinburgh, viz., Earl of Eglington, Lord Hawke, Mr. Howard M. Lloyd of Delfryn, South Wales, and J. A. Ross. There are also three Plates shewn of Mr. and Mrs. Whall of Musselburgh.

In the September Part is an artistic Plate of George Robert Hewlett, etched by a lady for her son, with full poetic taste in the drawing. The estimation in which the Plate was held is evidenced by her realizing $400 worth of books for the Manila Memorial Library, besides commendatory letters from President Roosevelt and Mr. Samuel Putman Avery. Some Plates by young Australians of the Mullins family are also given, those for Barbara and Hilda Lane being very artistic. There are also four very effective ones by Mr. Ern. Hill of Birmingham, shewing grace and art combined, and another Plate by Miss May Sandheim for Catherine Kennedy Erskine, a delicate and poetic drawing. A Plate of Rev. G. R. J. Fletcher is very effective, although trenching somewhat on the figure of St. John the Baptist. It is designed by Mr. Harold Nelson, and had it been a picture the Royal Academy would no doubt have welcomed it as an ecclesiastical portrait of St. John. Another Plate is by Miss Meyer for Father Walter Mackey, who has taken the portrait of Christ by a celebrated foreign artist for her model—a species of idolatry happily only confined to a few enthusiasts. The Plates for identification now run up to No. 596, and each Part is worthy of its fellow.

Northern Notes and Queries. A Quarterly Magazine devoted to Antiquities of Northumberland, etc. Edited by Henry Reginald Leighton. No. 1. January 1906. Newcastle-on-Tyne: M. L. Dodds, 61 Quayside.

THIS is again another "Notes and Queries" (Annual Subscription 6*s.* only), being intended for our Northern friends. The first article is on the Clerical Celibacy in the Diocese of Carlisle. In the twelfth century the sons of the Clergy were treated like the sons of other persons; but opposition came from the Bishops, and Papal denunciation of local custom was unsparing, all the resources of the Latin tongue being laid under contribution to find the most odious epithets to describe the marriage and the wife. The Clergy of Cumberland went on its own way of marrying and giving in marriage, backed up as they would be by the laity of Cumberland. Adam, the first Vicar of Crosthwaite, left considerable property to his sons, also to his daughter Galiena. But the irascible Bishop Hugh de Beaulieu began a stormy quarrel with the Clergy, and marriages of his Clergy troubled him very much, but he was unable to cope with the "evil." Bishop Hugh went to Rome in 1223 about forbidding benefices being passed from father to son, or to hold benefices, but he died on his return journey unlamented by his diocese, particularly by the rising generation of Cumberland.

There is a short Paper on the family of Hedworth of Durham, and also an account of a Surtees Lawsuit. Wills from MSS. of Sir Cuthbert Sharp, now housed at Durham, are given, also some family notices from Newcastle from 1721, and Queries about several other families. Altogether the Part before us gives us a good idea of the ground it takes up, and we wish it all the success it wishes itself.
